Germans Bomb Eastern Coast in Widespread Attack

Nazi Airmen Concentrate On Port Several Hours, Braving Bitter Weather

Attack Most Widespread in Two Weeks, but Not 'Really Heavy', British Say; Hotel in Southeast Coast Town Partly Destroyed and Former Boxing Champion of Army among Casualties

[By The Associated Press]

LONDON, Feb. 5 (Wednesday)—German bombers struck at England's Eastern coast last night in the most widespread attack in about two weeks, but nowhere was the attack described as "really heavy."

They flew through bitter weather that blanketed part of France with snow and concentrated on an East coast port for several hours.

One hotel was partly destroyed in a Southwest coastal town, and among the bodies recovered from the debris was that of Jim McMurray, a former heavyweight boxing champion in the India army.

Some fire bombs fell in London.

Hostile craft were reported over East Anglia, the Midlands, Southwest England and Wales, and near Liverpool.

The Nazis flew through bitterly cold weather and a stiff Northeast wind which swept the Dover Strait, and apparently were taking off from snow-covered airports in France.

Nazis Lose Five Planes

Before nightfall, during a brief period of exceptionaly visibility, people upon the English shore could clearly see heavy snow between Calais and Boulonge.

The "all clear" sounded in the London area before 11 p. m. (5 p. m. E.S.T.)

The day had brought announcements of a punishing double British blow at the Nazi-occupied French airport of Brest, and of the destruction of five German planes over Britain and the channel.

The day's bag, the British Press Association reported, brought to thirty the number of German planes shot down in 1941, against one RAF plane lost in defense.

American Planes Used

Two formations of coastal command bombers—(this command is making increasing use of American planes)—assaulted Brest, at the tip of the Brittany peninsula, last night and again at dawn. Each attack was officially described as successful, the second wave arriving "be-

O'Conor "Cracks Down" on Finance Group Tax Change

Committee Reverses Itself on Amendment before Amazed Senate

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 4 (AP)—Gov. O'Conor "cracked down" today on a recalcitrant Senate, forced the Finance committee to reconsider a "dangerous amendment" to the administration's tax bill, and saw the measure pass to third reading without a dissenting vote.

The complete about-face, made doubly significant by the committee's 11 to 2 vote for the amendment last Friday, came after O'Conor's fiscal advisors disclosed that the state's anticipated surplus at the end of next biennium would be $2,026,127 instead of the $3,800,000 which legislators have been considering nearly a month.

Battle lines for debate on the revenue measure collapsed when administration leaders forced its recommittal to the Finance committee soon after the Senate convened, then forced a recess.

Half an hour later the Finance committee brought the bill back without the administration-opposed amendment which would have given the counties and Baltimore City a 5 per cent additional share of income tax revenues.

Committee Reverses Itself

Majority Floor Leader Dudley C. Roe, (D-Queen Anne's) told the amazed Senate the committee had reconsidered Friday's action because members had not then known the "true picture" of the state's financial condition.

Senator Wilmer Carter (D-3rd Balto), committee member, who sponsored the income tax redistribution amendment, asserted that "since Friday things have happened" and "it has now been disclosed by the administration" that the actual surplus at the end of 1943 would be about $1,800,000 less than the Senate had supposed.

On the basis of such new information, Carter said, he had no alternative but to drop support of his amendment.

By votes of 23 to 6, and 26 to 2, the Senate then quickly beat down attempts by Senator Wilmer Fell

Cabinet Shake-Up Is among Terms For Laval Return

Agreement for Franco-German Collaboration Laid before Petain

[By The Associated Press]

VICHY, Feb. 4—France's Naval Minister Jean Darlan was expected tonight to shuttle back to Paris within few days with Chief of State Philippe Petian's reply to the terms under which Pierre Laval, former vice-premier, would return to the French cabinet.

Darlin returned only today in Petain's private train from the occupied captital, where he had held a twenty-seven-hour conference with Laval, Otto Abetz, German ambassador to Paris, and Fermand De Brinon, Vichy's envoy to the occupation authorities.

Hold Long Meeting

In a meeting lasting an hour and a half, Darlan was understood to have laid before Petain, Foreign Minister Pierre - Etienne Flandin and War Minister General Charles Huntziger an agreement for German collaboration which needed only the marshal's approval.

Political sources said reports from Paris indicated that Laval's demands, which would have been approved by the German officials at the Paris meeting, included a complete cabinet change with Laval becoming minister of interior in charge of German negotiations.

He also would have complete charge of information services and possibly the police.

Flandin Would Leave Cabinet

Flandin, who succeeded Laval as foreign minister when Petain ousted him Dec. 13, would have to leave the cabinet, it was understood . Darlan would become the new foreign minister, with Huntzinger retaining his war portfolio.

Marcel Peyrouton, whom Laval would succeed as minister of interior, would be shifted to the new post of empire minister while the future status of Rene Belin, minister of labor and industrial production, and Yves Bouthillier, minister of Finance, was uncertain.

Informed circles considered the main question of taking Laval back into the cabinet and acceding to German demands for a more sympathetic atmosphere had been decided generally.

Only the exact makeup of the new cabinet and Laval's terms needed arranging, it was said.

Movements Kept from Press.

Darlan's movements and impending cabinet changes have been kept from the French press which printed only the bare announcement of the admiral's trip to Paris.

The Vichy Government named the general director of the municipal police as temporary successor to Roger Langeron, Paris prefect of Police.

(Authorized sources in Berlin disclosed today the arrest of Langeron on 'serious charges" which were not specified.

(This information came as informed spokesmen said Germany was watching the new reconstruction movement in Vichy and the

Batista Explains Purge to Troops In Long Address

Cuban President Declares Ousted Men Would Have Slain Him

[By The Associated Press]

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 4—Two officers accused of a seditious plot against President Fulgencio Batista—Col. Jose Pedraza and Lt. Col. Bernardo Garcia—were escorted to a Miami-bound plane late today, and it appeared that a brief Cuban political storm had blown itself out.

Their alleged associate, Col. Angela Gonzalez, the deposed head of the Cuban navy, remained in custody, and Batista went ahead energetically with the program which apparently had led to the trouble—a broad reorganization of the nation's armed forces.

Pedraza, who was head of the Cuban army until Batista ousted him last night, appeared unexpectedly at the airport this afternoon riding in the automobile of his successor, Col. Manuel Lopez Migoya, and with a military escort.

Batista Emerges Stronger

He entered a chartered airplane with Garcia, who was removed last week as chief of the Cuban national police; with his military aide, Capt. Owen Parr, and with Garcia's brother-in-law, Major Juan Serra of the police.

At 2:55 p. m. they took off the Mainland, under the watchful eyes of Colonel Lopez Migoya. Senora Pedraza and the wife of Colonel Gonzalez and other members of the expatriates' families went along.

Batista, so far as appeared here, emerged from it all stronger than ever.

He worked urgently all during the day—despite the fact that Senora Batista was in a hospital awaiting the birth of a child—and ousted several commissioned officers of relatively minor rank from the army, navy and national police.

By coincidence, another Batista child, "Papo," likewise was born at a critical time in the president's fortunes — in September of 1933, when the then Staff Sergeant Batista led a coup d'etat.

This morning the president, announcing to the nation's armed forces the deposal of their erstwhile chiefs, declared that had matters

Declares Britain Is Almost Miraculously Fortunate in Its Leadership; Leaves for Home

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON, Feb. 5 (Wednesday) —(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie left London early today on the first stage of his journey home, after a day in which he visited both the Prime Minister of Ireland and the King and Queen of England.

It was an unprecedented conclusion to an unprecedented visit to these islands. Now Willkie will fly home, via Lisbon.

The 1940 Republican presidential contender who came here on a personal investigation of Britain's war effort still was wearing a dinner jacket when he left the capital.

His last goodbye was to some Americans serving in the home guard. He shook hands all around and said:

"Keep smiling, boys."

Impressed by Unity

Willkie looked tired after his strenuous week and two days in Britain.

His outstanding impression of the whole visit, he said, is "the morale and unity of the British people of all classes . . . If anyone says the people of this island are not united they are laboring under a delusion. I think I know how to test people."

Before he flew to Ireland for a surprise audience with Eamon De Valera, Willkie said he would ask him about the controvelsial subject, of British use of Irish ports bases, which De Valera has flatly refused. When he flew back to London this evening, Willkie said, "I got the information I wanted."

Then, early tonight, emerging from an audience with the King and Queen, he commented, "Britain is almost miraculously fortunate in her leadership."

Takes Things in Stride

All this, on the last day of his nine-day trip to find out all he could about warring Britain, Willkie took in his stride. He will leave London by air in time to catch the Pan-American Clipper at Lisbon at midnight Wednesday. The plane is being held for him until that hour.

Willkie flew to Dublin this morning from a Midlands airport, accompanied by John W. Dulanty, the Irish high commissioner in London, and his own traveling companions, John Cowles and Longdon Thorne.

Before he saw De Valera, he said many of the questions he would ask him touched on the Irish naval and air bases which Britain wants

25 Persons Are Injured as Giant Engine Explodes

Man in Cab Which Was Blown 60 Feet into Air only Slightly Hurt

DENVER, Feb. 4, (AP) — A huge mogul type passenger locomotive exploded in southwest industrial Denver today, catapulting its boiler and cab sixty feet through the air and injuring twenty-five persons, none seriously.

Weighing hundreds of tons, the boiler and cab arched backward over a switch engine and crushed an American Railway Express car. Two men in the switch engine suffered shock.

Steam and flame shooting from the exploding locomotive injured nearby motorists, broke windows in factory buildings and injured workmen on a flatcar.

The train, consisting of the passenger locomotive, switch engine, two express cars and three passenger cars carrying crew members, was moving slowly from the Union station to the Denver & Rio Grande Western railroad yards when the blast occurred. No passengers were aboard.

George F. Dodge, an executive of the railway, said that "it seems at this time that low water in the locomotive boiler was the cause of the explosion."

George J. Ehalt, 40, hostler helper on the "pick-up" train, was the only person on the 873,000-pound passenger locomotive when

Planes Few and Obsolete Montana Senator States; Roosevelt Lashes Back

Wheeler Giving Comfort to Hitler, President Says in Effect as Bitter Feud Is Renewed; Army Has Only 639 Planes, None Capable of Fighting in Modern War, Senator from Montana Declares

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—In a renewal of one of the bitterest feuds in the capital's history, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) today accused the Roosevelt administration of denuding the nation's aerial defenses to aid Britain, and President Roosevelt rapped back with a virtual charge that Wheeler was giving comfort to Adolf Hitler.

On hearing of the President's remarks, the Montana senator then issued a statement saying: "I am perfectly willing to compare my patriotism with that of his closest advisers. I have no interest, financially or otherwise, in Germany or England."

The exchange came in the course of a day that saw Representative Wadsworth (R-NY) swing his influential support behind the President's Lend-Lease British-Aid bill "or something like it." Meanwhile General Robert E. Wood, president of Sears Roebuck, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, opposed the legislation as "a war bill" which would place in Mr. Roosevelt's disposal "the blood and resources of our entire nation."

Planes Few and Outmoded

The President and Wheeler have engaged for several weeks in a bristling exchange of statements. In the last of them, the President quoted the late William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, as having said Wheeler once declared that Nazi domination of Europe was inevitable. The Montanan replied that this was a "slanderous" effort to discredit his opposition to the lease-lend bill.

Today, Wheeler said he had "absolutely reliable information" that as of January 1, the army had only 639 planes, none of them capable of fighting under modern conditions, because they lacked self-sealing gasoline tanks, firing power or armor. Of 2,884 planes produced here last year, he asserted, 2,308 went to England or other countries.

Reporters raised the question of Wheeler's statistics at the Presi-

British Continue Rout of Fascists In African Drive

Mechanized Forces Enter Cirene, Libya; Bengasi Next Objective

[By The Associated Press]

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 4—The mechanized forces of Britain's imperial army have entered Cirene, ancient city of Western Libya, adding the fourth major Italian stronghold to their conquest of the North African colony and placing the Union Jack within 13 miles of Bengasi, their next big objective.

Cirene, some sixty miles west of Derna, formerly was the general headquarters of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani,, whose retreating forces now are strung out along the road leadinb westward to Bengasi under savage pounding of the Royal Air Force.

With the entry into this Biblical city, founded in the Seventh century, B. C., the British in less than two months have advanced some 250 miles in their drive to throw Mussolini's forces out of the North African desert colony.

One of the choicest plums yet to fall into their hands was gained by the British at Cirene. It is the center of fertile table lands watered by fresh springs and is only ten miles from the Mediterranean port of Appollonia.

Roaring ahead of the land forces, RAF planes pounced on Italian forces speeding by truck toward Bengasi and smashed their vehicles with bombs, then came back to strafe the dirorganized Fascists with machine-guns.

An official RAF statement said many of the Italians were mowed down and that twenty to thirty of their vehicles were blown to bits. In one area alone, some fifty miles northeast of Bengasi, the RAF made six separate bombing and machine-gun attacks.

Other RAF units pounded the Berka airdrome at Bengasi and railway facilities at Barce, forty miles southwest of Cirene. Buildings were reported left in flames at Berka and considerable damage inflicted at Barce.

There still was no indication of any stiffening of resistance by the Republicans Urge Five Billion Cut In Proposed Public Debt Ceiling

Fear Use of $16,000,000,000 Increase To Finance 'Extravagance'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (AP)—Republican members of the House Ways and Means committee, contending that the proposed $16,000,000,000 increase in the public debt limit could be used to finance "further administration extravagances," declared today an $11,000,000,000 increase would be "more than adequate."

"We of the Republican minority are of th eopinion that it is both unnecessary and unwise to increase the authorized debt limit at this time to the amount of $65,000,000,000," the ten-member group said in a formal report to the House. The present limit was set at $49,000,000,000 last year.

The legislation to authorize the proposed increase has been approved by the committee's Democratic majority. Saying that the requested increase indicated the administration's intention to "engage freely in further deficit-financing," the minority report said official budget estimates had placed the probable national debt by June 30, 1942, at $58,000,000,000. Hence, they contended, a $60,000,000,000 "ceiling" would be adequate for at least the ensuing year.

At the same time, the Republicans proposed a five-point program, adoption of which they said would tend to promote a sound fiscal policy.

The suggestions included creation of a non-partisan congressional committee to coordinate federal revenues and expenditures; economizing in non-military expenditures; prevention of wasteful expenditure of military appropriations; increasing federal revenues to pay currently for as much of the defense program as possible; and exercise of caution in increasing the public debt.

Settlement of Strikes in Milwaukee And Chicago Defense Plants Sought

Pullman Standard Car Employes Vote To Return to Their Jobs

[By The Associated Press]

A strike involving approximately 1,300 Michigan City, Ind., workers was settled yesterday while federal negotiators continued efforts to adjust differences which are keeping two large defense plants idle in Chicago and Milwaukee.

The Michigan City strikers—employes of the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Company—voted to return to work under a temporary agreement.

Conciliators were hopeful of breaking the Chicago deadlock, involving some 6,500 tractor workers of the International Harvester Company. After a conference with representatives of strikers and employer they said additional meetings would be necessary.

In Milwaukee, 7,000 employes of the Allis-Chalmers Company were still out. The plant closed down two weeks ago while working on $40,000,000 of defense orders. Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the Federal Conciliation Service, discussed the strike with defense officials in Washington but said that no definite plans for action were formulated.

The CIO cited figures which it said illustrated labor's "amazing docility in a period of business upturn, huge profits and high living costs." Its news service said there were "fewer workers involved in strikes last year than in any year since 1932; and there were fewer man-days lost through strikes than in any year since 1930."

Other labor developments:

WASHINGTON — Legislation to prohibit strikes on defense projects was termed "abhorrent" and unconstitutional by the AFL in its monthly publication.

Ford Is Ready To Make Bomber Planes for U. S.

Reaches Tentative Agreement on Making Parts for Two Companies

DETROIT, Feb. 4(AP)—Henry Ford it was learned here today, has informed the War department he is ready not only to build parts and sub-assemblies for bomber planes, but that he would like to construct the complete plane on a moving assembly line.

Ford's proposal was made following announcement of the tentative agreement under which the Ford Company would make parts and sub-assemblies for Douglas and Consolidated bombers. The manufacturer already has drafted plans for a special factory with a mile-long assembly line to be erected on property Ford already owns and of sufficient area to provide a large airport adjacent to the plant.

There was no intimation as to the rate of output Ford would expect to attain in assembling the complete bomber. It was explained, however, that the schedule of production on the Pratt & Whitney radial, air-cooled 18-cyclinder engines which Ford expects to start turning out late this summer, calls for one engine an hour.

It was emphasized by sources close to Ford that the plan he has in mind is related wholly to the production of the bomber planes for which Ford along with Chrysler and

Dallas Paper Is Complying with Law, Court Holds

Says Law Should Not Unsettle Amicable Relations of Firm and Employes

DALLAS, Feb. 4 (AP) — Federal Judge William H. Atwell held today that firms paying wages or salaries equal to or in excess of Wages and Hours law minimum in pursuance of genuine contracts are in compliance with the act, regardless of methods of pay.

The court's ruling denied a petition by the United States Wage and Hour division for a restraining injunction against the A. H. Belo Corp., publishers of the Dallas Morning News and operators of radio stations WFAA and KGKO, to halt alleged violation of the Fair Labor Standards act.

Further, Judge Atwell sustained the Belo Corporation's petition for the declaratory judgment as to the legality of its methods of paying employes.

The Wage-Hour division had contended the corporation was not computing overtime in accordance with the act's provisions, arguing wages and overtime should be based on a computed hourly wage in spite of a specification as to such wage in an employe's contract which provides for a weekly guaranteed sum as a salary.

Judge Atwell commenting on the methods of figuring wages and hours as insisted upon by the Wage-Hour division, said:

"It emasculates the right of contracts. It emasculates the fullness of the meaning of the word employe. It makes vassals of employe and employer and leaves us hanging by our thumbs at the mercy of the construction of the government as to what we mean when we say contract."

The judge added he could not conceive "of a law being intended to unsettle amicable relations between employer and employe."

Employes testified they were satisfied with the wage arrangements.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Week to week fluctuations in British cargo tonnage losses in the north Atlantic, as reported by London, are worth noting for the clue they may give to the timing of an all-out Nazi attack on England.

Heavy winter seas, short daylight hours and usually low visibility combine to limit the effectiveness of the German submarine and air campaign to sever England's Atlantic life lines. Not before late March, April or possibly May can German strategists count with reasonable certainty on conditions at sea being more favorable for their purposes.

The most recent London report of tonnage losses covered the week ending January 26. The total was about half of the exceptionally high figure admitted for the previous week, and less than half the average weekly toll for the war thus far.

Weather conditions off the Irish coast offer the obvious explanation. They tend to make the sighting of British shipping, even of big convoys, a matter of chance for Nazi aircraft and submarines.

Britain is using Atlantic lanes every day to the fullest possible extent of her available cargo shipping. She must be straining every nerve to make the most of winter conditions to stock England with food reserves and other essentials against what may be coming in Spring.

No figures are available on the total overseas tonnage reaching English ports every day or week. They would throw a flood of light on the question of British ability to stand virtual siege by air and sea.

It cannot be doubted, however, that the flow of essentials from overseas into England is right now at its peak for the war. Surface craft use the seas in all weather and during night or day. The fact that winter came before Germany was prepared to strike decisively at England not only saved the tight little isle from invasion, but gave it an invaluable season in which to store up supplies.

Virtually two-thirds of the fuel of the German long-range bombers scouting the sea lanes off Ireland is consumed in reaching the scene of operations and returning to their bases. The time they can remain on station is sharply limited.

Many other factors, too numerous to mention here, tend to defer a full scale Nazi attack on England for a month or two at least. The final German offensive of the World war was launched March 18. That was the earliest date on which the German high command believed heavy troop movements in France would be feasible. And it is altogether likely that even a later date this year for a final smash at England is being discussed by Nazi leadership.

U. S. To Press Anti-Trust Count Against ASCAP

Efforts To Settle Complaint by Negotiation Collapse Again

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4, (AP) — Justice department officials said today that efforts to settle an anti-trust complaint against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers by negotiation had collapsed again and that criminal charges would be filed in Milwaukee tomorrow.

Victor O. Waters, special assistant to the attorney-general, who has been in charge of the long negotiations, is in Milwaukee ready to file an information alleging that ASCAP has engaged in illegal control of music.

Negotiations have been in progress for several months concerning allegations made in a suit filed against ASCAP in 1935, interest in which was revived by the society's current dispute with the radio broadcasting industry. As a result of that controversy, no ASCAP-controlled music has been used on a majority of the nation's radio stations since December 31.

When conferences with the anti-trust division failed just before Christmas, Attorney-General Jackson announced that criminal proceedings would be instituted against ASCAP and its opponent, Broadcast Music, Inc., which was established by the radio industry, the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

A week ago, however, BMI, NBC and CBS signed a consent decree which is to be effective only when the Justice department obtains similar restraints against ASCAP.

Batista Explains

gone the other way he probably would have been dead by now.

In the name of the republic he offered guarantees for the safety of Pedraza and Gonzalez, but he said that had he himself been arrested he would have been assassinated by order of the captors.

To soldiers, sailors and police forces gathered at Camp Columbia Batista spoke for forty-five minutes, explaining his actions and introducing the new army chief, Col. Manuel Lopez Mogoya, as a man "without private interests."

Pedraza, Gonzalez and Col. Bernardo Garcia, who was removed last week as national police chief, had been concerned with personal interests, the president asserted, and not those of the state.

Batista went on to declare that he was the "voice of the people," and that he had been "forced" to act. The incident that set off his action, he said, was Pedraza's dispatch yesterday of an aide asking for an interview.

This, the president said, showed a lack of respect for the authority of his office.

Garcia was pictured by Batista as a dupe who, trusting Pedraza, had disobeyed presidential orders and was too often in Miami or Varadero while he was needed here.

The conspirators, Batista asserted, had required certain officers of the army, navy and police to make a choice in loyalty as between them and Batista himself.

The president was applauded during his speech at Camp Columbia and in Havana the cabinet council voted to congratulate him upon the firmness of his attitude and to offer him complete support. No disorder anywhere in the country had been reported.

Batista himself held command of the army for a few hours before elevating Lopez Mogoya. Lieut. Col. Jesus Gomez Casas was appointed to the navy command and Col. Manuel Benitez to head the national police.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP) — Two Cuban officers deposed by President Fulgencio Batista under accusation of seditious plotting arrived from Havana today in a chartered Pan American Airways plane.

Col. Jose Pedraza, who was head of the Cuban army until he was ousted last night in a dramatic shakeup, led the party in its flight to Miami from Cuba—a trip that was made with approval of the Batista government.

Accompanying him were Lt.-Col. Bernardo Garcia, who was removed last week as police chief; Pedraza's military aide, Capt. Owen Parr, and Garcia's brother-in-law, Major Juan Serra of the police.

Six women and children, members of their families, arrived in the same plane and began their trip through United States customs at PAA's dinner key airport.

Twelve Army Men Escaped Injury In Plane Crash

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Feb. 4 (AP) —Twelve army air corps men escaped unhurt when an army bomber taking off from the local airbase for Dayton, Ohio, went into a ground loop, crashed and burned this afternoon.

They had come here to take part in maneuvers while secretary of war Henry L. Stimson was a visitor at the airdrome Monday.

The big ship roared down the runway, went into its ground loop and crashed, flames igniting the craft.

The group included Capt. Chester P. Gilger, pilot; Capt. William Lewis Jr., co-pilot; second Lieutenants Donald M. Keyser, Duane H. Skiles, Ted H. Holsteen and Maurice Hogan Air Corps Reserve; Staff Sergeant Mike V. Sabol, crew chief; Staff Sergeants Brase K. Brown, Charles H. Ross and Mason J. Todd, Corporal Charles O. fore the town had a chance to recover from the first."

The weather was very bad, yet, the air ministry said, "the pilots not only reached their objectives but were able to await favorable opportunities to run in and find the target area, the Brest docks constituted the main target, but other Northwest French areas, as well, were attacked."

The British admitted one plane was missing from these operations.

Off Suffolk, a German bomber was shot down into the sea, the air ministry reported, after it had bombed a town, damaging houses, business buildings and public services and causing "a small number of casualties."

Kent Is Bombed

Two German fighter-bombers later were shot down in the outer Thames Estuary and a fighter was clawed out of the air off the coast of Kent, the same communique said. Some bomb swere dropped in Kent.

In the Southeast coast town, two bombs were dropped before two British fighters got on the attacker's tail, rode him out to sea and, it was reported, dispatched him.

General Motors has been asked to produce parts and sub-assemblies.

He long has cherished the desire to build the entire plane, they explained, and offered his plan as possibly a time-saver, in which materials, machinery and assembly lines could be coordinated to full advantage.

At the same time, these Ford associates said, this plan should not be tied in with the Ford assertion of last spring that he could, under certain conditions, make 1,000 airplanes a day.

"We're talking about bombing planes now, not pursuit jobs, as we were last year," one source close to Ford said, adding "bombers present a lot of different problems."

Rome Says British Convoy Is Attacked By Torpedo Boats

Reports Seven Hits Are Scored on English Ships in the Red Sea

[By The Associated Press]

ROME, Feb. 4—Seven hits on a strongly escorted British convoy in the Red sea by a squadron of Italian torpedo boats were reported today by the high command.

The small speedy craft launched nine torpedoes in all last night, a communique declared. British destroyers and cruisers opened fire, the announcement said, but the Italians got away unharmed and returned to their base.

(An authoritative British source in London said that Italy could have stationed torpedo boats in the Red sea before she declared war last June, and that the boats possibly were based at Massaua, chief port of Eritrea.)

The high command acknowledged that Italian troops, trying to halt a creeping British advance into Eritrea Eastward from the Sudan, had withdrawn from Agordat and Barentu. It said they had established new positions East of Agordat, where they repulsed a British attack.

(The British anounced the capture of Agordat Sunday and Barentu's fall was made public yesterday.)

Italy had held Agordat, an important highway and rail center, since 1893, when an Italian force defeat about 10,000 Sudan Dervishes under Ahmed Ali of Khartoum.

Edward Wright Escapes Injury when Auto Catches on Fire

East Side firemen were called yesterday at 8:10 a. m. to Henderson avenue when the automobile of Edward B. Wright, traveling toward Knox street, caught on fire from a short circuit in a heater beneath the front seat.

Wright was forced from the car by smoke and flames, but he escaped injury. The interior of the machine was badly damaged.

Firemen were summoned at 9:20 a. m. to the home of C. H. Marsh, 528 Pearre avenue, to extinguish a flue fire.

Flier Is Killed

NORTHPORT, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—Second Lieutenant Sherman E. Denny, of San Diego, Calif., was killed today when an Army P-40 single-seater pursuit plane crashed in woods near here.

Denny, attached to the Thirty-third Pursuit Squadron of the Eighth Pursuit Group, had taken off from the army air base at Mitchel Field, about twenty miles from this Long Island community.

Women constituted 8.4 per cent of persons arrested in the first nine months of 1940.

Massaua To Fall, British Predict

Capture of Vital Eritrean Port within a Week Seen by Observer

[By The Associated Press]

LONDON, Feb. 4 — Capture within a week of Massaua, Italian Eritrea's only good port and the goal of Britain's biggest push so far into Mussolini's East African empire, was predicted by a British military source tonight.

British sources said other phases of the many-sided East African campaign also are developing with small forces already forty or more miles deep into Ethiopia and patrol activity begun further south on the Somaliland border.

Britain's array of "All-Empire" troops have six weeks left in which to try to take over Italy's vast colonies before the rainy season sets in and military circles refuse to commit themselves on whether they believe the job can be done in that time.

Much depends on the morale of Italian troops and the strength of the "patriot" movement in Ethiopia, they said. They acknowledged that the British drivers were "just beginning" and said that the British so far had been in contact with only between 30,000 and 40,000 Italians of a generally accepted total of 250,000 in East Africa.

"Extremely successful action" in Ethiopia by British and Ethiopian forces was reported by a British military spokesman today, and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that Britain will participate in "temporary measures of military guidance and control" there with Emperor Haile Selassie.

FBI Nabs Man on Extortion Charge

Night Club Waiter Attempted To Get $8,500 from Betty Grable

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced tonight that James David Thompson, 24-year old night club waiter, had been arrested at Philadelphia on a charge of attempting to extort $8,500 from Betty Grable, blonde motion picture actress.

Thompson is accused, the bureau said, of having mailed a letter from Philadelphia Jan. 24 demanding that Miss Grable mail the money to him under an alias in care of general delivery, Philadelphia. He threatened her with bodily harm if she failed to comply, the FBI said.

The actress was to have inserted an advertisement in a Philadelphia newspaper after mailing the money.

The FBI said that Thompson was arrested this morning and probably would be arraigned tomorrow on a charge of violating the Federal extortion law.

...ate Job Multipication ...alls for Pruning Knife

THERE IS NO ROOM for disagreement on ... declaration by the Baltimore Sun that the ...posed state budget is not a starvation budget ... any manner of means and that its adoption ...uld cancel much of the painstaking pruning ...e by Governor O'Conor two years ago.

"The budget is designed to add many new ...itions to the state's permanent payroll," the ...n points out, "and this at a time when the ...payer can look for nothing but heavier and ...vier burdens from Washington."

Quite so, and it is something that our state ...makers must keep in mind. The fact, point... out by the Commission on Government Ef...ency and Economy, Inc., that 530 payrollers ... included in the specified parts of the budget ... that an undetermined additional number ... included in the concealed portions beyond ... number already employed, indicates that ...e drastic pruning is necessary in the con...plated salary lists.

These additional salary listings account for ...astonishing boost of more than twenty-two ...cent in the budget increase. That, to in...ge in the vernacular, is going some.

Some of these proposed increases are ex...dingly generous. The largest group of state ...ployes and the largest salary pay roll is for ... institutions for the care of the insane—the ...l salary appropriations being $2,016,533 and ... positions numbering 1,346, increases of ...5,012 and 146 positions.

The largest single increase is $305,900 for ... State Roads Commission, where salary ap...priations amount to $1,799,241 for 515 posi...ns, or 101 more than provided for in the cur...t budget.

Increases of fifty-five jobs and $152,874 in ...propriations for the correctional institutions ... also listed, the totals being 501 positions and ...99,380 in appropriations.

There should be, as the Sun says, careful ...dy of these proposed increases, particularly ... amazing boost in the number of state jobs, ...i, as the commission has pointed out, com...te data of the salaries contemplated in all ...isions of the state government should be sub...ted to the legislature. The omission of part ... these gives rise to a suspicion that more jobs ... being sought than are actually necessary.

When the excessive allotments for jobs and ...aries are eliminated, as they should be, there ... seen good reason for the demand that has ...ie into coalition proportions among both Dem...ats and Republicans in the General Assembly ... a further decrease in the onerous income tax, ... possibly elsewhere.

...rong Reasons Favoring ...he Fireworks Measure

SEVERAL POINTS stressed by John William ...rett, 2nd., president of the Maryland Society ... the Prevention of Blindness, should carry ...isive influence in behalf of the measure for ... regulation of fireworks again pending in ... General Assembly.

One is that casualties in this state during ... last four Independence day celebrations ...ounted to four persons killed and more than ...00 injured seriously enough to require medical ... hospital attention.

Another is that in the nine states that have ...minated fireworks in substantially the same ...nner proposed in the bill now pending in the ...neral Assembly, a vast reduction in casualties ...sulted. In six of them, Delaware, Indiana, ...na, Pennsylvania, Utah and West Virginia, the ... resulted in an accident reduction of ninety-...ree per cent. In Pennsylvania, fireworks ac...ents fell from more than 1,700 in 1938 to ...hty-five in 1939 and fifty-eight in 1940.

Another point refutes the argument that ... measure would promote unemployment, par...ularly in Cecil county where there is a fire...rks manufacturing plant, a contention Avirett ...s has been thoroughly exploded. Avirett ...nts out that the bill does not prohibit or re...ict this manufacture but would merely prevent ... promiscuous sale and use of them in this ...te, whereas only a small percentage of the ...eworks manufactured at Elkton is sold for ... in Maryland. The bill also allows the use of ...ge public displays under proper supervision. ...rther, the only large fireworks concern in ...cil county is now chiefly engaged in the man...acture of commercial, military and naval ex...sives and pyrotechnic products. Thus, the ...employment argument doesn't seem very ...ong here.

As Avirett declares, the real issue presented ... this safety measure seems to be one of pol...s and profits versus the safety of children ... even the profits part of it doesn't hold up ...der the facts cited.

...elief Costs Should ...ave Further Study

MORRIS S. BYRD, secretary of the Citizens' ...ergency Tax Control Committee, advances the ...gument that continued falling off of relief ...penditures in Maryland should furnish the ...is for a further study of relief costs by the ...neral Assembly with the view of making fur...er cuts in the relief appropriations carried in ...e proposed state budget.

"The 1942-43 budget calls for welfare ap...priations totaling $9,073,886 for the two years, or at the rate of $4,536,943 a year," Byrd says. "The 1941 appropriations totaled $4,915,920, and since October 1, 1940 — the beginning of the fiscal year 1941—the department of Welfare has had over $500,000 more than it needed, which amount has been impounded under authority granted by the 1939 legislature to turn back to the state treasury unexpended departmental balances from appropriations.

"This would indicate that the 1942-43 appropriations are already at least $120,000 a year higher than 1941 expenditures, which may be even further reduced with continued increased employment in industry taking people off the relief rolls.

"Obviously, further revision downward is in line with the necessity to reduce all unnecessary state government costs, and to aid taxpayers in meeting national defense taxes.

"As it is, the people of Maryland are faced with paying for a state government operation which will cost them $6,000,000 more in the next biennium. This doesn't make sense in the light of the present crisis and of the probabilities for reducing costs in all branches of the government, including the administration of relief."

Certainly if the relief demands are gradually diminishing, which is quite natural in view of the upward trend in business and industry, there is no need for continuing appropriations in excess of probable needs.

When Partisanship Is Carried to Extremes

WE are constantly being advised that the war emergency calls for complete elimination of partisan considerations, that these should be dropped altogether in view of the larger and more momentous questions affecting the national security.

All this is good enough, but it would find more enthusiastic response if many of those proposing it would, as the old saying has it, practice what they preach. Job hunger is insatiate, it appears, and no effort to camouflage it under the guise of national defense is being overlooked in official quarters.

There is the case of the inveterate patronage-grabber, Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, for example. The senator at last accounts was still busy trying to have a man named J. Ross Eakin fired from his job as superintendent of the Great Smoky National Park. Eakin's great crime was that of being a Republican, and he committed the heinous offense of voting for Alf M. Landon in 1936.

But, the National Park Service and even Secretary of the Interior Ickes have held that Eakin is an excellent man who does his duty well and they have refused to oust him. McKellar even brought the question up for investigation by a Senate committee, which showed that the evidence upon which McKellar based his charge was obtained by a despicable and illegal trick. A McKellar henchman who was a Tennessee election official, admitted smearing ink on the ballots he gave to Eakin and other park employes so that he could identify them when the ballot box was opened.

It is a shame that the committee did not administer a public rebuke for that sort of dirty work and the senator's connection with it, but senatorial courtesy being what it is, the senator got off without even a gentle slap on the wrist. Meanwhile, it is stated that the senator is still out to "get" Eakin.

The incident is a reminder that narrow, selfish partisanship is pretty bad stuff, and that it more often does more harm than good to those who seek to employ it.

Mussolini may now lose Ethiopia, after having spent $650,000,000 conquering and developing it. Other folks who have made bad investments will know just how he must feel.

A paragrapher, viewing world affairs, calls for a revival of the one about fifteen lunatics escaping from an asylum and the keepers bringing back thirty-two.

It looks as if the sheep are going to have to give until it hurts. It will require 540,000,000 pounds of wool to clothe an army of 4,000,000 men.

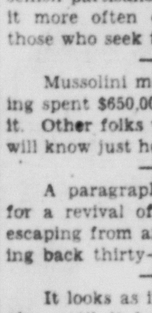

The war is stimulating a great deal of poetry, the metric feet of some of which seem to have fallen arches.

It used to be "Another day, another dollar." Now it is "Another day, another deficit."

Are We "Thankful Thieves"?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Far up in the African hills, where the great Nile takes its rise, there lives a hairy, yellowish people—shy and wild, cruel and helpful, cunning and graceful. They are the pygmies, and it's thus that Emil Ludwig describes them in his great book about the River Nile.

Marshall Maslin

He is not sentimental about this tiny folk, but he gives them their due. Read this paragraph:

"Like the northern brownies, these goblins are thankful thieves. When, at night, they venture out of their forest to steal bananas, the food they like best because they have none at home, they often leave under the pillaged tree a piece of meat from some animal they have killed, or think out some still more elfin way of payment; while their Negro victim sleeps, they creep about on softly falling feet and weed part of his plentation, or set up a trap to catch game for him, or drive the monkeys from the bananas."

I remember reading the credo of Albert Einstein years ago when he first came into world renown and I have forgotten nearly all of it but the one paragraph in which he confessed that he was often haunted by the feeling that he would never be able to repay what he had received from the great thinkers, great discoverers of the past. Such humility in a great man's heart seemed to me then, and seems to me still, to be greater even than his accomplishments in the field of science.

I remember that Robert Louis Stevenson once spent a night in the open with his donkey, among the stars and dews and the perfumes of the night, and as he came down the trail at sunrise, he scattered little silver coins along the way in whimsical payment for a perfect night's lodging—and afterwards wrote lovely appreciation of the beauty granted to him.

And I remember with regret how often we complain of our troubles and how seldom we are thankful for the joys and delights that may come into our lives. . . . We take without thought, enjoy without gratitude, and fail to be as thankful as the yellow pygmies of the African hills. . . . When I think on this I am ashamed and cannot call myself a "civilized man."

England Carries On Vigorous War To Kill Off Rats

BY EDWIN C. HILL

England calls all hands to fight rats. Scientists and sanitation engineers contrive defenses against them. National "rat orders" are issued, and printed broadsides arouse and inform the citizenry. "Trap that fat!" is a national rallying cry.

Edwin C. Hill

From the debris of ruined cities, with the wreck or confusion of man's ordered life, these beady-eyed legions of evil are alert to strike—age-old challengers of man's rule of the earth, the vanguard of plague, famine and death, the lurking nemesis of muddled, heroic little man when his rational living is caught in the dark unreason of war.

In today's news story about London's fight against rats, with their peril of disease and plunder, there is a passing reference to the ancient defenses of the Sussex farmers against rats, but no details as to what these defenses were. And here is a reminder that much more than Napoleon's twenty centuries, envisioned at the pyramids, look down on old England's battle to live.

By Exorcism

From the ancient Romans who invaded England, the Sussex farmers got their incarnation against rats and it is not unreasonable to suppose they are using it today. There are two principal forms of exorcism. In one of those, the farmer rises before daybreak, stands at the lair of the rats, a cellar, grainery or field, and repeatts three times the words of a strange abacadabra. The words were unintelligible until in recent years etymologist traced them to the ancient Latin incantation against rats—"Srat verbum apud Deum vestrum," distorted in centuries of repetition. The frmer then leaves at the rat hole, or highway, a piece of paper on which the following words are carefuly printed:

"Male rats and remale rats,
I conjure you by the great god to go out of my house, all my habitation and betake yourself elsewhere, there to end your days."

From the Greeks

Still another similar exorcism is believed to have come down from the Greeks, possibly transmitted through the Romans. The farmer writes the following on a sheet of paper, which he places carefully, written-side up, on a freshly hewn stone, at a place where he is sure it will get the rats' attention:

"I adjure you rats here present that ye neither injure me, nor suffer another rat to do so. I give you yonder field, if I catch you here again, but by the mother of the gods, I will rand you to pieces."

This paper also must be put in place just before sunrise. It is related in Sixteenth century chronicles of rats and rat-catchers that it was by no means uncommon for farmers to set aside a small field to keep the rats satisfied, and there was a strangely persistent belief that you could bargain with rats.

Among Many Peoples

This belief has existed among many peoples, through many centuries. In the Island of Bali they are still appeasers, when it comes to rats. Annually, they catch a pair of the sleekest rats they can find, present each of them with a small packet of white linen, with an elaborate ceremony, and entertain them lovishly, providing luxurious quarters and food. But somehow rats are rats and by all accounts they never ratified these proceedings. Here in our country, in the bright incandescence of reason and science, we are perhaps amused with tales of these fantastic doings, far away and long ago. But we live in the ternal twilight of our past.

It was little more than a century ago that Frederick Baskin, a British scientist, returning to England after a study of American agriculture, wrote as follows:

"It is not uncommon for American farmers in the more remote and backward distrncts to write friendly letters to rats and nail them on the doors of their barns or grain storehouses. These letters are proprietary and are in effect pleasant suggestions that the farmer and the ratts may co-operate nicely if each takes only his due. But I have observed that the farmer never hesitates to use a trap or fowling piece whenever opportunity offers."

Medical Men Busy

There have been no appeasers among the British health authorities who were preparing defenses against rats in London years before the war started. Among them are some of the most brilliant medical men in the world and they were bringing to a splendid climax their research on the spread of deadly viruses when the bombs began falling.

Long before men knew of these viruses and how they may be carried he had a deadly fear and hatred of rats. They have lived in the race mind as the embodiment of intrinsic and essential evil, demanding first all our powers of exorcism and now all our powers of scientific combat. Thus are the centuries overlapping and intermingled in our will to live, in our eternal striving, and in our undying hope that the light of reason will some day be a death ray for perils small and great, from the unclean legions of the Pied Piper to that last devastating monster of our own devising—war—the ultimate evil and the touchstone of all other evil.

CHURCH LEADER

George B. Elliott

WILMINGTON, N. C., Feb. 4—Geo. B. Elliott, just out of Harvard law school, started work with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad in 1896. Today he is the president of that railroad system, as well as actively interested in a half dozen other railroads and industrial enterprises.

In spite of his many business responsibilities, Mr. Elliott has accepted election as a member of the national council of the Episcopal church.

War Responsibility for United States Is Seen in the Lease-Lend Measure

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. — This column is about the Lease-Lend bill debate, now beginning in Congress.

Mark Sullivan

What is here written goes on two assumptions:

One is that our people want Britain to have help from the United States, every help short of actual participation by us in the war. Our people want Britain to win this war. Our people feel that by Britain winning, America will be safer, our defense more secure. And our people prefer a world dominated by Britain, detest the thought of a world dominated by Nazi.

The other assumption is that our people should have complete understanding of whatever is done by our government with respect to the war. We are moving closer and closer to the war. This is inevitable—indeed the truer way to put it would be to say that the war is coming closer and closer to us. In this condition, this column goes upon the assumption that as we get closer to the war, our successive steps should be based on intelligence and understanding—not emotion.

Sickened by Disillusionment

This column thinks that much of the unhappiness our people have suffered during twenty years past, and much of the world's present distress, is a sickness of disillusionment. This disillusionment had one main cause—the fact that as we entered the Great war twenty-four years ago, we proceeded by emotion, rather than informed understanding. Had we been guided by intelligent understanding, we would have entered the Great war with practicable objectives, not with the intangible and impossible objectives that were set up in our minds by relying on slogans and acting upon emotion.

Turn now to the present question before Congress. For understanding what the Lease-Lend bill proposes to do, the change it would bring about—begin by considering the status that now exists.

Britain is now buying war supplies from American manufacturers. This is done with the complete assent of our people and our government. Our government approves the process and facilitates it. Not only does our government further the sale of supplies by our manufacturers to Britain. Our government itself sells or otherwise transfers to Britain supplies owned by our army and navy, such as the fifty destroyers. Our government helps Britain to procure in America every plane, ship and other munitions that we can supply her with, subject only to keeping for ourselves as much as is indispensable for our own armed forces. To this end, our government co-operates with the British government, the British purchasing program is coordinated with our own armament program.

Impediment Arises

All this goes on already. To this process recently arose an impediment. The impediment is, lack of ready cash on the part of Britain—Britain is coming toward the end of her available financial resources.

For lack of cash on Britain's part, what is the remedy? The remedy is credit—a loan by our government to the government of Britain. (We would feel better if we made it a gift). Credit is specifically what Britain asked for, Britain's expressed wish for credit was the beginning of the whole present discussion.

Not only is a loan (or gift) by our government the direct answer to Britain's need. It is the simplest way for us to meet that need. It would involve us in no responsibility beyond the act of making the loan. The loan would be a completed act. Thereafter, everything would go on as it now goes on. With the money procured by our loan to her, Britain would buy such supplies as she needs, make such use of them as she deems best. She could use them herself if she chooses. She might turn som over to Greece or China, or send them elsewhere. Whatever she does with them, would be wholly her responsibility. All the future control would be with Britain, all the responsibility would be on Britain. There would be no continuing responsibility on us.

That would be the effect if we made a simple direct loan to Britain. But, by the present proposal in Congress, we do not make a direct loan to Britain. We do something very different.

Continuing Responsibility

By the Lease-Lend bill Congress grants money to the president. With this money the president would buy war supplies. After the president buys the supplies, he will do with them as he sees fit—transfer them to Britain, or China, or Greece, or elsewhere in his discretion. The responsibility would be on him. It would be a continuing responsibility. Daily, so long as the war lasts, the president will make decisions—sending supplies to what nation or area of war he considers best for the winning of the war.

The Lease-Lend bill is not a single step, as a loan to Britain would be. The Lease-Lend bill is the beginning of a progression of steps. It puts upon the president a continuing responsibility. It is a responsibility for the duration of the war. It is a partial responsibility for the conduct of the war. It will become a responsibility for winning the war.

It may be the people of the United States are ready to take on this responsibility. Some of our people think we should. Possibly it is desirable we should, even imperative we should. But if we are to take this responsibility, at this time, our people should understand that we are doing it.

A Way To Aid Our Wildlife

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The preservation of wildlife during the severe winters which are common to Pennsylvania and other northeastern states each year engages the attention of sportsmen. It is not sufficient merely to scatter food in the woods at stated intervals. Wildlife conservation planning takes a long-range view. It is proposed to provide for animals and birds by planting seeds to produce the food that will sustain them through the winter months.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission recommends a mixture known as "Pennsylvania Game Food and Cover Plot Mixture," suggesting that it be planted in plots of one-quarter to one-half acre, either in or adjacent to good natural cover such as bushy ditch banks, fence rows, gulleys or woodlots. Many landowners, the commission says, are willing to plant the mixture along the edges of their fields if the mixture along the edges of their fields if the seed is furnished them. The food plot will attract and hold insect and weedseed eating birds and thus be of considerable assistance to the landowner in his battle against pests.

The cost of planting these plots is said to be insonsequential and it assures better sport for the hunters during the game seasons—sport to which most of them are willing to make this modest financial contribution.

Intelligence A Defense

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Someone, either Secretary Hull or President Roosevelt, as we recall, recently spoke about the necessity of erecting a "dam of strong national defense." Has anyone outside of a tolitarian state ever succeeded in erecting a dam that would hold back the flow of thought? Are there any barriers a republic can construct which will "defend us against ideas?" Hitler doesn't have to conquer a country solely by force of arms. His pioneers, his vanguard, is composed of men and women who use policies, programs and ideas as their weapons. Against this sort of an attack the free nation has no defense except the intelligence of its people.

All it is necessary to do in a free country, in order to overturn the balance, is to convince a considerable portion of the people that notwith standing their intelligence they are members of the "have not" class and that the thing for the "have nots" to do is to seize upon the possessions of the "haves." This sort of thing has become surprisingly prevalent, alarmingly prevalent even, in some quarters. And as for the doctrine that we'll "have to work like beavers" to improve economic, social and spiritual [illegible]—try and sell it to the public [illegible] the present state of the public mind.

The accepted doctrine is that we are going to improve things by doing less. Moreover, the accepted theory also seems to be that it is necessary for us to develop spiritually. Economic doctrines, law made by man and all that sort of thing, have become the gospel whereby the present generation is to be saved.

Lease-Lend Power Is Not Necessary, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — The good old industrial "rule governing action" should be applied to "aid to Britain short of war" as proposed in the "Lease-Lend" bill. That rule is to test every proposed new action by asking three questions in the order named. (1) Why do it at all? (2) Why do it now? Why do it this way?

Hugh S. Johnson

If it gets by Question number 1, with a good answer, it must reply to number 2—otherwise it stops there. Only if number 2 is satisfied does it proceed. If this happens, its acceptance, rejection or amendment will depend on the answer to question number 3.

A Sufficient Answer

There are a few earnest, honest, courageous and sincere men, like Col. Lindergh, who answer question number 1 (why do it at all) thus: "There is no good reason." But the answer of a large majority of sloganeered public opinion and also of informed authorities is: "Because such aid to Britain as will help to stop a threat of unfriendly European action westward is enlightened self-interest."

It seems a sufficient answer, so we go on to number 2: "Why do it now?" There is less certainty about that based largely on the objection that it will interfere with our own terribly laggard and lacking defensive preparation. But let us assume that, by wise administration, a proper balance can be struck. While no important aid can be effective this year without striping our own defense and while we may face an entirely different situation next year, yet time saved now will be time saved in 1942. So let us say to the proposal at the barrier of question number 2: "Pass friend and all's well."

That brings us to Question number 3—why do it this way? — the particular way proposed by the lease-lend bill?

Huge Treasure Involved

That bill authorizes the president in his own unlimited discretion to lease, lend or give away any part of all the billions of dollars of property the government owns to any nation he elects and every dollar's worth of stuff for which Congress has appropriated or may hereafter appropriate further billions. That includes a great treasure in gold, silver, copper, petroleum, cotton, corn, wheat and vast equities and first lien interests in much of the entire pool of property in America. It includes all of our military and naval airplanes, warships, tanks, guns and ammunition.

It simply but slickly appropriates "all the money there is for any purpose whatever." In view of the bankruptcy of other nations at war and their lack of supplies, it makes the president of the United States quartermaster general, chief of ordinance and minister of military and naval supplies for any warring nation he may favor. It does much more than that, it empowers him to become Banker to the Embattled World—Lord High Keeper of the Sinews of War Everywhere on Earth.

Simpler Method Better

This is no exaggeration. Nobody who has studied this bill can successfully deny what has just been said. The only object ever announced for this bill was to furnish munitions to Britain, China and Greece even though they can't pay for them. For that no such wholesale surrender of congressional power is remotely necessary. For that a far simpler method of specific grants-in-aid would be better and would meet almost universal approval. Nobody denies that. Nobody truthfully can deny it. It is said: "Don't you trust the president? He will not use these powers." The answer is: "If he will not use them, why grant them and don't we trust Congress too?"

There is overwhelming further objection. The "chief of military, naval and financial supply" of a waring nation is as much responsible for its victory or defeat as its commander-in-chief. He undertakes control of its strategy so far as logistics are concerned—and this is exactly as far as armies and navies are concerned. We are not yet in this war and we don't want to see our president responsible for its conduct.

The answer to question three (why do it this way?) is "DON'T."

MURDER MAKES A HERO

By ELLIOTT FILLION

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

I MIGHT have sent Cary to his death.

That was the first thought which passed through my mind, confused and bewildered by the many and diverse emotions I had suffered that day.

Seeing that black figure, slowly struggling on through those breaking waves, hidden from view one moment, the next dimly glimpsed through flying spray and pouring rain, I completely lost heart.

But I wouldn't have called him back for anything on earth. Never again could anyone hurl the charge of cowardice at him. Phobia or no phobia, he was today proving himself a man.

The sound of a broken, gurgling breath came to my ears. My eyes left Cary's dim figure just long enough for me to see Flame, so-called because of her bright red coat, sink slowly down and stretch her head out upon the earth. Her heaving flanks betrayed her utter weakness, yet the stable was only a mile from the cove. He must have pushed the mare to the breaking point the entire way.

It had only been a fleeting glance I had given her, but in that instant Cary had disappeared from view. My knees gave way beneath me and, as I had done once before, I slumped to the ground.

Tears which I had shed so easily at my third fall were denied me now. The love which had surged from my heart to my lips at the pressure of Cary's, swamped me in an overwhelming sense of loss. I could only sit there in despair and envision the long lonely years ahead.

It would have been easier to have lost him when my entire being was in revolt against his spinelessness. Yet now, though crushed by sorrow, I could hold my head as high as the proudest. No stigma of shame could be attached to his name. His final act, this forlorn hope, would place his name among those of Greater Love.

I was roused from my misery by a furious kicking and scrambling close by. I started to my feet. The hoofs of Flame, in death agony, were too near to be disregarded. My eyes were drawn to her. I looked, blinked, and looked again. She was on her feet, head once more held high.

I stumbled to her and laid my face against her neck. She last had felt the touch of Cary's hand. She deserved the best oats and clover for the rest of her life. She had given nobly of her strength, was prepared to do so once more. The pity of it all was that she would never carry her master again.

Cary was gone, Janet might be, too. I couldn't be sure if she had reached the island or not, but Kaye was still there. She was still waiting for someone to come to her relief.

I looked at the waves rolling in almost to my feet. They were sending fountains of spray high in the air, smashing against the bridge, some breaking there, some rolling on to fill the cove with a smother of white water.

Could I succeed where Cary had failed?

There was just a possibility that I might. He had not learned to swim. If knocked from his feet, panic might have overtaken him. It is horror unspeakable to go down under a weight of water, smothering, half drowning.

I would try. I might win through —if I didn't— Just as life held no future attraction for me, so death held no terror.

I took a step nearer the bridge, stopped, looked and looked again. At the farther end two dark figures had just come into view. Slowly they were moving into the water. One seemed much larger, bulkier, than either Janet or Cary could be.

Had their sacrifices been in vain? Had Bill Wing roused from his drunken stupor and gone to Kaye's rescue?

At times, I seemed to see a black thread-like line connecting the larger figure plowing steadily onward and that slighter form following in the rear.

Breathless, I watched. Wave after wave hid them from my sight, but each time, when the water temporarily subsided, the two figures were still moving toward me.

If I went onto the bridge now, I would be only a hindrance, not a help. I would wait until I saw one or both were in difficulty; then I, too, would give the best that was in me.

The figures were halfway across the bridge. An enormous wave rolled down upon them, and I, unable to help, clasped my hands in wordless agony, for fear it would sweep them away.

It didn't. When the wave broke and fell back to a lower level, the figures were still there. Could they endure that constant buffeting? It seemed to me that the waves were rolling in more frequently and with greater violence now than when I first arrived at the cove.

While I waited, each minute seemed an hour. From tiny specks barely showing through the rain and spray, the figures grew larger, and then I saw what made me tremble and grow faint with hope revived. I recognized the figures.

It was Cary leading. In his arms he carried a figure; Kaye that must he, and a rope was fastened from his waist to the form clinging to the rail behind him.

Janet was safe; she was roped to Cary. Kaye couldn't be dead. If she were, Cary would never burden himself with her body in such a storm. She must be living, perhaps hurt or sick or unconscious, but living. That was joy unspeakable.

He had done what he set out to do. He had crossed the bridge, found Janet and Kaye, and was returning. If his strength lasted—

I stepped into the water. Each wave, breaking, drenched me with spray which pierced the wool suit and stabbed my skin like icy needles. One wave, creeping higher, curled high above my ankles, but I kept my place.

It would be insane to venture out upon the bridge unless I was actually needed. As Janet had said, I was a "little bit of a thing." If I should wade toward them and lose my footing in a foolhardy attempt to give help where no help was needed, I would only be adding to Cary's already difficult undertaking.

It would be best for me to stay where I was, at the extreme edge of the water. If they made the crossing without disaster, I would be there on land to help them home. If either one stumbled, slipped or fell before they reached the end of the bridge, I would dash to help them. The nearer they came the higher my spirits arose. I began to believe they would safely reach the land.

I realized that I was trembling. Either the biting cold or the long strain to which my nerves had been subjected was taking toll. I couldn't decide which. I mustn't waste my strength that way. What use would I be, if they needed me, dashing into the water, shaking like a victim of palsy?

And then it happened!

A mighty wave broke over the bridge, and through the flying foam I saw Janet go down, and Cary, thrown off balance by the sudden strain upon the rope which united them, was beaten to his knees.

With terror, like the Old Man of the Sea, weighting me down, I waded out into the water which sucked and tore, with avid fingers, at me. I would do what I could. Save them or go with them.

Frightening me almost out of my senses, an imperative hand fell on my arm. Sharp, commanding, Captain Lancy's voice rang in my ears:

"Go back! We'll get them!"

He splashed by me. One, two, three, four, five state troopers struggled after him. They swarmed into the water, slickers streaming in the wind.

They were fresh, unwearied; they hadn't been battling with the waves, there wasn't force enough in all the water in the cove to stop them.

My eyes were on Cary. He was back on his feet. Could he save Janet o had the rope broken and would she be washed away?

Why didn't he move forward? What was wrong? And then I saw that he was pulling on the rope. He had Janet by the shoulder. He started forward again.

Captain Lancy, in the lead, was almost at Cary's side when a great breaker towered high above the bridge. Every figure seemed hurled toward the land as by some sudden upheaval. The air was filled with foam and spray through which I saw the broken timbers of the bridge.

'Church of Tomorrow' at Kansas City Has Shafts of Light Instead of Steeple

KANSAS CITY — The world's heavyweight fight king, a 71-year-old preacher, and an architect famous for the unorthodox have helped build the "church of tomorrow" in Kansas City.

At an age when most men think about retiring, Dr. Burris Jenkins is erecting the $175,000 ultra-modern edifice. Architect Frank Lloyd Wright designed it. Fighter Joe Louis is helping pay the bill.

Dr. Jenkins and his congregation began before the ashes of what had been their $250,000 community church cooled thirteen months ago.

"This is a challenge rather than a calamity," Dr. Jenkins told his congregation then.

He called in Wright — the man who designed Tokio's Imperial hotel. Wright, as usual, came up with the unusual.

He calls the architecture for the church usonian, a term applied to Americans by novelist Samuel Butler in one of his books. Windowless walls, where horizontal lines predominate, give the streamlined effect. Shafts of lights, projected into the sky from a flat dome forty feet above the chancel replace the traditional steeple. A three-decked parking arrangement for 150 cars and open air terraces for outdoor meetings are other innovations. There will be no stained glass, no frescoes. The building is peach-colored.

"It is no mere church," reports Wright. "It is ten years ahead of its time and should be a lesson in architecture to Kansas City."

As striking as the church itself is its financing. To hurtle the last "financial barriers," the preacher called on his friend, Promoter Mike Jacobs, and Mike responded by agreeing to bring Joe Louis to town in March for a benefit match.

City officials looked over the church plans and thought them a shade too radical. They liked the auditorium with its 1,200 cushioned seats, its banquet rooms, kitchens and Sunday school classrooms on both balcony and main levels, but they were dubious about a new principle of gravity heating through steam pipes laid in the concrete floor. Wright asked:

"What more logical place could there be, since heat rises?"

They approved his air-conditioning from concealed ceiling outlets, again were skeptical about the thin, hollow walls supported by tubular steel, and a "floating foundation" of crushed rock.

Dr. Jenkins threatened to take the church outside the city limits if officials interfered. Finally, a compromise saved everything except Wright's "floating foundation."

Dr. Jenkins will continue his longtime practice of showing good moving pictures on Sunday evenings ("They're better than most sermons"), and of holding open forums on Wednesday.

"I don't think God will have any trouble getting into my new church," he comments.

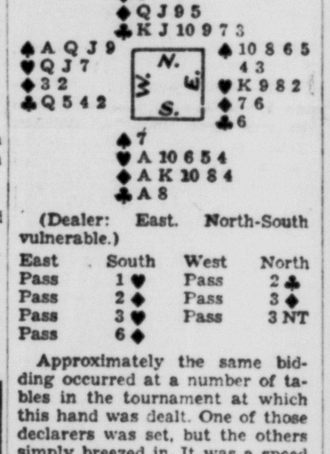

Dr. Jenkins and Kansas City are going to get their "church of tomorrow" next spring.

FIGURE PROBABILITIES

DESIRE to be known as a rapid player keeps many bridge devotees in the class of mediocrity. They like to have others brand them as quick thinkers, and to gain that unimportant distinction they really make of themselves shallow thinkers. They have a tendency to set out upon the work of making a contract by means of the very first method they see which has a chance to attain that result. The better policy—and the only one followed by really good players—is to look for alternative ways and means, and then figure the probabilities in favor of each as against the other.

Approximately the same bidding occurred at a number of tables in the tournament at which this hand was dealt. One of those declarers was set, but the others simply breezed in. It was a speed boy who took it on the chin. West had led the spade A and then, seeing the heart singleton in dummy, shifted to a trump, his diamond 3. The declarer saw at once that, if West had three clubs to the Q, his contract was easy. So he looked no farther, but went after that possibility.

After winning the diamond trick in his own hand, he cashed the club A and immediately led the 8, overtaking it with the 9 in dummy. Of course he intended, after that, to lay down either one or two more trumps—whatever number he needed to drop the hostile ones. But that did him no good, as East ruffed the second club, and he was beaten right there.

Now don't say you don't see that very kind of careless play yourself, for you do. Let's hope you will be more like the other declarers, who either dropped the trumps first before they chanced that silly finesse or else found a sounder way to play the hand—by discarding a club on the spade K, cross-ruffing hearts and clubs, dropping the last trumps and then cashing the setup heart 10 for the final trick.

One Should Never "Boil" an Egg

So far as is known, the first method of "cooking" eggs was that used by the ancient Egyptians. They placed them in a sort of sling in which the eggs were turned rapidly until heated to a certain point. Later, it was discovered how to roast eggs in beds of hot coals. Today, perhaps the best known way of preparing eggs is by "boiling."

Yet one should never really boil an egg, say the culinary experts. They claim the best "soft-boiled" eggs are obtained by first bringing the water to a boil, reducing the heat until the water is just below the boiling point, then putting in the eggs and leaving them for from five to eight minutes, according to the taste of the consumer.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Does Life Begin at Forty?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Someone has said that life begins at 40. But I really think it began for me about a week ago at a party, and I'm not yet 25. I've never been very attractive to men, as I'm rather backward. I met a man I just fell for at first sight, and he seemed to like me too. I was so happy, as we danced together all evening until the wee small hours.

He took me home from the party, and made a date with me for three days later. What I can't understand is that he never showed up or sent any word or excuse or apology. What if I should happen to meet him again? Shall I ignore him completely or pretend I didn't notice that he failed to show up?

DISAPPOINTED.

Don't you think it would flatter this young man's vanity if you ignored him or attempted to pay him back in rudeness equal to his own? Be pleasant when you see him. However, I wouldn't make any more engagements with a young man so lacking in good manners that he doesn't know enough to phone some sort of an excuse when he breaks an engagement.

Draftee Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I was drafted for training in the army, and now that I'm away from home I do get lonesome. I went to a nearby church where they had a party, and I met a girl. I've been to her home and met her folks, and they seem very nice to me but I have a feeling I'm too poor to go out with her. She has a swell home and everything about her is prosperous. Do you think I ought to keep on visiting her or not?

DOUBTFUL.

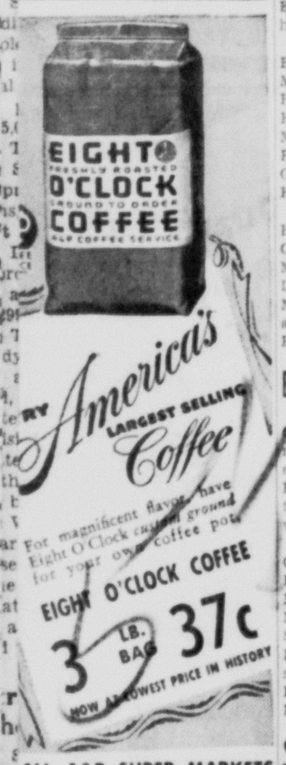

Where is your courage and your ambition, my dear boy, that you're afraid to continue a delightful friendship with a girl just because she happens to live in a "swell" home? I have to remind you of the old adage, "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady." Even if you never marry her, nothing is more advantageous than a friendship with a nice girl who has the background of a lovely home.

Launching into a defense of the after Wood had finished, Chair- George (D-Ga) of the Senate ign Relations committee said e was danger in the two ex- es of opinion that seemed to epresented in the United States The extremists who want to go ar and the extremists who be- that any grant of broad au- thority to the executive means that we will go to war."

Feud Reopened

He said he begged Wood to remember that the authority contained in the bill could be exercised only when the president found that it was necessary for the defense of the United States.

The Roosevelt-Wheeler feud was reopened early in the day when Wheeler cited statistics about planes.

"How can the people of the United States act intelligently with reference to our defenses when they are not given a breakdown of our plane holdings and do not know the real facts?" the senator asked.

"For the past eight years, the President has had a subservient Congress," he continued. "He has talked belligerently, and yet this country at present hasn't a single plane suitable for carrying out his belligerent attitude."

House Debates Bill

As the Montanan, who has been engaged in a bitter feud with President Roosevelt, made this statement, the House was busily debating the Lease-Lend bill. Meantime, the Senate Foreign Relations committee was hearing Dr. Charles A. Beard, historian, and General Robert E. Wood, chairman of Sears Roebuck, oppose the measure, and Major George Fielding Eliot, a writer on military subjects, endorse it with qualifications.

Beard told the committee the bill was a measure "for waging an undeclared war" and said there was no guarantee that it would "buy peace or keep us out of war."

Wood, who was quartermaster general of the army in the World war, urged the legislators not to be frightened into passing a "war bill." It was "utterly preposterous," he said, to believe Germany could invade the United States across 3,000 miles of ocean.

Eliot was of the opinion that the breakdown of the balance of power in Europe threatened a break in the world-wide balance of power which he thought a menace to the United States. He favored the bill with "proper" restraints upon the powers it would give President Roosevelt.

Governors Favor Measure

At the same time, Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate committee made public a telegram in which the governors of eight Southern states urged enactment of the measure "substantially as introduced." The eight were governors Dixon of Alabama, Haybank of South Carolina, Broughton of North Carolina, Holland of Florida, Adkins of Arkansas, Johnson of Mississippi, Jones of Louisiana and Price of Virginia.

The bill itself would authorize the President to have war materials manufactured here or elsewhere to be paid for by subsequent appropriations. It would empower him to sell, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of this equipment to nations whose defense he deemed vital to the defense of the United States. Wheeler, calling for an immediate negotoated peace abroad, has declared his unalterable opposition to the measure.

Today he said he had "absolutely reliable information" that the army has not a single plane suitable for modern combat. During 1940, he said American industry delivered 2,884 planes. Of these, he added, 2,308 went to England and other foreign countries and 576 went to the American army and navy.

Vorys Attacks Bill

As of January 1, he asserted, the army had 639 planes—ninety-one heavy bombers, thirty-eight medium bombers, six light bombers, one pursuit fighter, 212 pursuit interceptors, 231 observation, fourteen reconnaissance and forty-six transport—but all of them were inadequate for foreign fighting because all lacked either self-sealing gasoline tanks, sufficient firepower or sufficient armor plate.

Representative Vorys (R-Ohio) said that no one contended the bill would produce "anything new for Britain in time for this crisis which is coming up in the next sixty or ninety days." He argued that British aid should take the form of a collateralized loan, with no extra powers for the President.

"You can't repeal a war," he shouted. "You can't repeal bankruptcy. And, if we get into a dictatorship, you can't repeal a dictator."

Bill Would Set Up State Division of Weights and Measures

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4 (AP)—Legislation to establish a state division of weights and measures was introduced in the Senate today under sponsorship of the Legislative council.

The bill provides for a state superintendent, a deputy superintendent, and at least fourteen inspectors throughout the state, the latter to be chosen under the merit system law.

Rules, regulations, specifications and tolerances as to weighing and measuring devices, "in conformity with those approved by the national bureau of standards," would be issued and enforced by the superintendent.

LARGE INCREASE IS REPORTED IN JOB PLACEMENTS

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP)—A sixty-four per cent jump in job placements for January as compared with January, 1940, was attributed today by the State Employment Service to increased industrial activity caused by the national defense program.

D. L. B. Fringer, director of the service, said 5,332 jobs were found during January, while the number of applications on file at the agency's fourteen local offices in Maryland decreased from 60,827 in January a year ago to 47,960 at the present time.

"The service is unable to fill many of the orders for workers received from employers," Fringer said, "due to the scarcity of certain types of qualified persons.

"The Baltimore office now has a number of unfilled orders for practically all types of skilled workers, and numerous vacancies for engineers, draftsmen, and other technically trained people.

"Male and female stenographers and typists are also becoming hard to find, but the service is particularly interested in locating young boys and girls who are high school graduates and who are looking for employment."

Fringer said the Baltimore office's Junior division found employment for 707 young boys and girls last month, many going to work for the first time.

The Baltimore office made 3,108 placements in January, a seventy-six percent increase over the same month last year.

January placements by other local offices include:

Annapolis 116, Cambridge seventy-six, Cumberland 188, Frederick 200, Hagerstown seventy-seven, Hyattsville 120, Salisbury 137, Towson 387, and Westminster 160.

February . . . .

Millenson's Month of Savings

. . These Are Typical of Millenson's February Values

You probably know that Millenson's NEVER have a complete store-wide sale. Millenson's honest-price policy doesn't permit it—first, because prices are never marked away up with the idea of marking them down again, thus creating a fictitious "sale price"—and second, because Millenson's prices are fixed in the first place at the lowest point consistent with successful operation of the store.

★★★However, even with the most careful management certain things accumulate which must be sold at reduced prices. Some of them are floor samples, possibly soiled or shopworn. Some are discontinued items, no longer available on the market. Some are odd pieces, left behind when all the rest of the complete group has been sold. And some of them are simply things which, for no known reason have failed to sell. They're Millenson's bad guesses, and we must take a loss on them.

★★★Some of them are listed here, and you'll find quite a few more. They're in every department, and every one is a guaranteed bargain, an honest value at its regular price and worth far more than you'll pay for it. BUT they're mostly one-of-a-kind items, and the earliest shoppers will get the biggest bargains! Come in right away—and remember, our convenient Budget Plan terms are available on sale prices, just as on regular prices.

ussell White Will Be Given A Hearing Today

ry Fork, W. Va., Man Is Charged with Being Hit-Run Driver

Accused of being a hit-run driver, ussell White, 30, of Dry Fork, W. a., is scheduled to be given a hear- g today in Ridgeley before Jus- ce-of-the-Peace A. C. Jewell on harges of drunken driving and iling to stop after an accident.

White was arrested Monday night ter Benny Wilt, 15, Ridgeley high hool student, was struck by a car hile on his way home from basket- ll practice. He was treated at llegany hospital for lacerations bout the head, face and hands.

Young Wilt told authorities the achine which hit him sounded like a model-A Ford. Shortly after the cident occurred Ridgeley Chief of olice C. V. Barncord arrested White on Blocher street, driving the me kind of car described by the outh.

The youth, step-son of Mr. and rs. Richard A. Williams, 8 Lyons reet, was improving last night at ome. White was held in jail.

to the station at 5:30 p. m. and e of the occupants asked if it hould be all right to park the aller for a few hours. When in- rmed they could do so, the visi- rs disconnected the car and said ey were going down town. Re- turning about 9 p. m. the attend- nt said, the strangers hooked up e trailer, paid to have the gas ank filled and departed, heading est toward Pittsburgh.

Immediately after the car and aller pulled out, the attendant ntinued, a local woman turned er the pocketbook to him.

Trailed Number Important

After questioning the attendant length, Flynn asked him if it as customary for service station en to jot down the number of ny suspicious cars and the atten- ant answered in the affirmative, dding that he marked down the umber of the New York trailer but ouldn't recall just where he had ritten it down. After three days' earch, the number finally was cated on a sheet of paper together ith many other numbers. Flynn en had a real clue when he btained possession of No. TRL-51- 43 New York.

Flynn immediately wrote to the ommissioner of Motor Vehicles in lbany, N. Y., and he learned by turn mail from Commissioner lavine J. Leisk that the trailer elonged to Carl E. Heinrich, of ingston, N. Y.

Writing to Charles Phinney, chief f police of Kingston, Flynn learned at Heinrich had lived there five ears but had left three months rior to the arrival of Flynn's let- r, supposedly to go to Florida. lynn also was informed that Hein- ch had two step-sons, James Woody, who was arrested in Kings- on in 1936 on a charge of grand urceny in the second degree and ad the reputation of being a "bad oy." Phinney referred Flynn to yracuse, N. Y., for better infor- ation on Heinrich.

Woody Violated Parole

The Syracuse police department otified Flynn December 12 that Woody was in custody for violation f his parole and the latter in- ormed police that Heinrich and lark picked him up in North arolina, November 16, and the fol- owing day left Wilmington, N. C., or Syracuse. Woody, at the time, as questioned as to the Cumber- nd robbery but denied any part n it. Syracuse told Flynn to send list of the losses there and if einrich or Clark were apprehended o examine the contents of the railer in an effort to ascertain ny goods stolen in Syracuse.

Picked Up in Sidney

William E. Rapp, chief of police n Syracuse, wrote Flynn, January 3, advising him that Heinrich, his ife and Clark had been picked up n Sidney, N. Y., and requested the umberland detective to write to nspector Maynard, of Sidney, also o send the latter a list of valu- bles reported missing in the Staar- an robbery.

Flynn did as he was instructed nd received encouraging news rom Maynard to the effect that lark and Heinrich had made tatements to the effect that they nd Woody had pulled the job in umberland while Heinrich's wife nd three children were parked in car a block from the Staarman ome. They also told of trying to nter another home in the same eighborhood and confessed they ntered the Staarman house at 6:30 . m.

Heinrich admitted that he had et Clark when the latter was re- eased from Auburn, N. Y., prison, October 24, 1940, and that he met Woody, his step-son, in Auburn the ame day. According to Heinrich he four remained together, then ent to Syracuse, where they stayed with a Mrs. Cromp for two days, then headed South. He further tated that they remained in North arolina five days and then stopped in Cumberland on the way north. The date of the visit here was giv- en as November 13.

Heinrich's Confession

Heinrich then made the following onfession:

"We parked our car at a gas station on the outskirts of town, coming towards Pittsburgh, Pa. We left the trailer at a station and drove back towards Cumberland. We drove back on top of a large hill. We attempted to get in a house near where we parked the car but couldn't get in. Then we went to another house farther up the hill on the same side of the street. Here we entered through a built-in garage which was opened. I am not sure whether or not the door from the stairs to the house was locked. If it was I got in by a pass key. We took a suit case and put a tin box into it some jewelry, suit of men's clothes, there was some bonds, some stock and about $85 in cash in bills, a $2.50 gold piece and two silver dollars. There were some other papers we didn't pay any attention to."

Heinrich admitted that "Orville and Jimmy were with him when the robbery was perpetrated here, while "Irene and the children were a block away from the house in a car."

Threw Bonds in a Sewer

When questioned as to the whereabouts of the loot, Heinrich said one batch of stocks and bonds was dropped in an areaway of a church at Columbus, Ohio and the rest were thrown into a sewer near a factory with a pyrex glass front.

Clark was present when Heinrich made his signed statement, according to Sidney police, and admitted his part in the robbery. He said, however, he did not know how Heinrich had disposed of the bonds. The jewelry, he said, was broken up and sold for old gold.

Sidney police informed Flynn that all three men have criminal records and will be held at the Binghamton jail to await questioning in connection with robberies in several other states.

of 1937, the answer goes on, the nine officers had their seniority fixed by resorting to "picking 'em out of a hat," but it is a moot question, it says, as to whether this method of settling their seniority status met with the approval of all concerned. In any case, the reshuffle determined by lot was put into effect by Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman, but without "ratification, order or consent of the Commissioner of Police."

The City Fathers claim that much dissension and discontent broke out among the nine officers after the "drawing" for seniority, and that Commissioner James Orr, in an effort to settle the dispute going on among the men themselves, issued orders directing that the seniority of each of the nine men would be determined by the order in which they signed the book on June 1, 1936, at the time of their induction into service.

Dismiss "Merit" Gauge

A third gauge for determining seniority, that of "merit rating," the answer dismisses with the assertion that settlement of the issue on such a basis "admits of the charge of discrimination, because the order in which seniority would be fixed could be ascertained in advance."

It is understood that the litigation started by Officer Wilson on the question of his "seniority" status is in the nature of a "test" case, on the settlement of which the tangle occasioned by nine men joining the police force on the same day will be unwound.

BARTON MAN IS FINED $37.90 ON TWO MOTOR LAW VIOLATIONS

John Davis, 45, of Barton, paid fines and costs totaling $37.90 yesterday in trial magistrates court on charges of reckless driving and failing to stop after an accident. He was acquitted of driving while under the influence of liquor.

Davis was arrested Monday night after his machine struck the parked car of Glenn L. Wigfield, Williams road, in the 600-block North Centre street, careened across the street, knocked seven garbage cans from the curb and crashed into a house, shattering several window panes in the dwelling. He then continued up Centre street and over to North Mechanic street where he parked the car.

Charles W. Murray, 513 Shriver avenue, who witnessed the series of crashes, notified police. Officers James J. Condon and John G. Powers investigated.

Davis, who operated a store and night club with his brother in Barton, had $354 in his possession when he appeared in court. Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., presided at the hearing.

do to keep from being gobbled up by the New Order boys.

In 1939, came another Pan-American parley with representatives pledging that no American countries should be used for European war operations. Next, the countries agreed that the freedom of American shipping lanes were of the utmost importance and that the European battle zone stopped exactly 300 miles off the American coastline.

Sees Inter-Nation Defense

Cox said that in all likelihood, inter-nation defense co-operation would follow next as the United States went ahead with its preparedness program and while Roosevelt continues the good work in Latin-America where the countries "have finally realized that the United States has no intention of intervention."

Concluding, Cox said complete solidarity with Latin-American countries was not wishful thinking and that this country must continue to foster the political, culturral and military understandings that include a hands off policy, student exchanges, new trade pacts, desirable loans, and a defense program that will ultimately become impregnable.

Gateway Chatter

Little six-year old Donald Myers, son of Paul E. Myers, well known Cumberland business man, is mighty put out because someone killed his nice collie dog.

Donald's two year old pet was found late Sunday afternoon lying in the rear of the Myers home at Francetown, with a .22 calibre bullet in his heart. At first the family thought the dog was asleep, but upon investigation found he had been shot and was dead.

The collie, which according to Myers, never harmed anyone or destroyed property, was not altogether Donald's pet, but he played with it more than anyone else. The dog belonged to Donald's older brother, Eugene, 16.

Now Donald has a little fox terrier, and he is hoping with all the power of his childish heart that the person who killed the collie will spare his other "pal." It's apparent that someone in the neighborhood doesn't like dogs.

Young Donald is so serious about the whole thing and particularly in seeing that no harm comes to his fox terrier, that he asked his father if it would not be possible to have something published in the paper, so that the "grouch" who killed the collie will not bother his fox terrier.

Chatter thinks a person who shoot shoots a harmless dog, which is a playmate of a little boy, stoops to just about the lowest thing possible. This is being written in the hope that Donald will get to keep his fox terrier and have many more romps with him.

With forty-three state legislatures in session or scheduled to meet this year and special sessions anticipated in other states, motor clubs throughout the country are prepared to scan carefully all legislation affecting car owners and to act quickly to protect their interests.

This statement was made yesterday by F. H. Rockwell, of the Western Maryland Automobile club, who declared legislative activities in the interest of improved highway and traffic conditions will highlight the club program during the current year.

"It is already evident," Rockwell said, "that the state officials and legislatures are making every effort to prevent new or increased taxes.

"This condition presents the problem of safeguarding special motor tax revenues against use for general purposes. On the favorable side is the definite and popular trend toward enactment of state constitutional amendments to prevent the diversion of motor taxes.

"Defense activities may be expected to exert a strong influence on legislative programs. In the face of the need for new roads and road improvements to meet defense traffic, highway departments will be pressed to meet normal traffic demands. In addition, strengthening of bridges and road widening on existing roads to meet military standards will be a large item.

"Evidence that motorists are alert to new conditions affecting their interest is seen in the increasing support and steady growth of the motor club movement."

Carloadings Increase 22,013 in January Compared to 1939

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad handled 225,561 cars of freight during the month of January 1941. Of this total 146,810 cars were loaded on line and 78,751 cars were received from connections. This was an increase of 22,013 cars handled over January 1940, when the total was 203,548, comprising 131,444 loaded on line and 72,104 received from connections.

An increase of 11,509 is shown over the month of December, 1940, when 214,052 cars were handled consisting of 136,911 loaded on line and 77,141 received from connections.

During the month of January 1930, 274,137 cars were handled, including 179,345 loaded on line and 94,792 received from connections.

For the week ended February 1, the B. & O. handled 52,808 cars including 33,840 loaded on line and 18,968 received from connections showing an increase of 6,002 cars handled over the same period of last year when the total was 46,806, comprising 30,015 loaded on line and 16,791 received from connections.

An increase of 1,015 carloads handled is also shown over the preceding week of this year (the week ended January 25) when the total was 51,793, made up of 33,396 cars loaded on line and 18,397 cars received from connections. For the corresponding week in the year 1930, the total was 65,721, consisting of 42,274 loaded on line and 23,447 received from connections.

Due to the illness of the recorder and several members of the council no other business was transacted.

HARPER HARMAN IS SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR IN PRISON

Harper Harman, 24, of near Oldtown, was sentenced to one year in the Maryland House of Correction when arraigned yesterday in trail magistrates court for violating the terms of a parole which he received seventeen months ago on a charge of "cattle rustling."

Harmon was arrested in August, 1939, with four other young men, on a charge of stealing a calf, valued at $24.50, from the farm of D. W. Robinson. The five, sentenced to one year in prison, were paroled for three years.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle said Harman, who was arrested last week in Ridgeley, W. Va., for being drunk and intoxicated, had violated the conditions of the suspended sentence.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew, who paroled Harman about a year and a half ago, imposed the sentence yesterday.

JUNIOR ASSOCIATION MEMBERS WILL ATTEND MEETING IN OAKLAND

A delegation of officers and members of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce will attend the dinner meeting and election of officers of the newly organized Oakland unit of the association, scheduled for the Manhattan hotel in Oakland, Wednesday, February 12. The dinner will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Frederic D. Steiding, local extension chairman, played a leading part in organizing the Oakland association, of which Charles L. Briner Jr., is temporary president.

Speakers on the program will include Thomas Baldridge, national vice-president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and chairman of the Winchester (Va.) Apple Blossom Festival for the past six years, and Max Armor, of Frederick, president of the Maryland association.

Oakland is the first unit of the organization formed in Garrett county and the ninth in the state. Other units are located in Baltimore, Salisbury, Bethesda, Frederick, Hagerstown, Hancock, Frostburg and Cumberland.

Frostburg will be represented at the Oakland meeting by a delegation headed by Ralph Race, former president.

Final Details for Lincoln Day Dinner To Be Made At Republican Meeting

Final arrangements for the Lincoln Day dinner will be made tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Knights of Malta Hall, Prospect square, when the Sixth District Republican Club will meet.

Polio Campaign Fund In Allegany County Is Boosted to $900

Receipts of the campaign being conducted in Allegany county to fight infantile paralysis yesterday totaled $900, according to announcement made by Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the President's Birthday Committee for Allegany county.

Approximately 300 of the 500 coin containers distributed throughout the county have been returned and the contents checked by William J. Edwards and Felix R. Brady, Jr., members of the local committee.

Reports on 100 containers in Westernport, Lonaconing, Frostburg, Midland, Cresaptown, Eckhart, Vale Summit, Luke and Clarysville are yet to be received as are returns from 100 containers still unreported in Cumberland. F. Harry Rockwell, chairman for South Cumberland, expects to make his report today.

The $900 now on hand includes money received in containers, birthday cards and from the local theaters.

A total of $1,335 was raised in the 1940 county campaign.

Chairman Conlon said that final figures on the campaign will be available February 28 and those desiring to make donations have until that date to do so.

Ford Company Is Through Engaging In CIO Squabble

Will Not Take Part in Controversy To Keep Issue of Unionism Alive

DETROIT, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company, its personnel director, Harry H. Bennett, said today, is "through" engaging the United Automobile Workers (CIO) in a controversy just to keep the issue of unionism "alive for them."

His statement was in answer to a letter to the Ford Company in which R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president, said the firm was "without right" to negotiate or enter into a contract with any labor organization except the UAW-CIO.

"I'm not going to answer any of their statements," said Bennett. "That's what they want us to do—just keep this thing alive for them.

"We are going to mind our own business and run our own plant. This thing of issuing statements just gives the union more controversy and they like trouble.

"We had collective bargaining x x x long before those fellows ever thought of it. We are going to mind our own business and run our plant. We are not going to do anything different than we have in the past. We never broke any laws and we are not breaking any."

Bennett's reference to law-breaking referred to union charges the Ford company was guilty of Wagner act violations.

Thomas's letter reiterated claims that a majority of workers had designated the CIO union as bargaining agent and added:

"It now appears that you are proposing to enter into negotiations with representatives of the American Federation of Labor. You are perfectly aware that the AFL represents virtually none of the employes in your plants."

Thomas renewed a request that Ford officials consent to bargaining conferences for employes of the River Rouge, Lincoln and Highland park plants.

Member of Guard Gets Discharged

"Army No Haven of Criminals," Says Regimental Commander of Case

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP)—The U. S. Army "is not a haven for criminals" and a Maryland National Guardsman who pleaded guilty to burglary charges here will not be permitted to accompany his comrades into federal service, his regimental commander said today.

The man, an enlisted member of the 175th Infantry, was given a probationary release by Judge Eugene O'Dunne after he pleaded guilty to burglarizing a store. In releasing him the judge remarked that "jail is not likely to cure anyone, but the army has been known to either cure or kill."

Col. Harry C. Ruhl, regimental commander, said the confessed burglar would be given a discharge bearing the notation "not recommended for reenlistment."

"We won't break down the morale of the regiment or of his unit by having him as a member," the colonel said. "I would like to bring to the public's attention the fact that the Army is not a haven for criminals, nor should it be considered a reform school for such characters."

Baby Is Born in Residential Street

DENVER, Feb. 4 (AP)—A baby was born in a residential street today as the 26-year old mother signaled feebly to passing motorists for aid.

Mrs. Rose Jenkins said she was walking from her home to Mercy hospital, where she worked as a special nurse. Suddenly, at the intersection of Seventeenth and Detroit streets, she was stricken and fell. The baby was born a moment later.

At a hospital mother and daughter were reported in good condition. Doctors said Mrs. Jenkins had not expected the baby for several weeks.

Ridgeley Cagers Bomb Moorefield To Win 34 to 17

Makes Sixth Straight P. V. C. Win of Season for Hahnmen

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Feb. 4 Special — Ridgeley high school's rampaging basketball cagers invaded this town tonight and stuck a defeat on the Moorefield high boys to the tune of 34 to 17.

It was Ridgeley's sixth straight win in Potomac Valley Conference competition and their eighth straight for the season. The scoring was evenly divided among the first team with Hartman being the only regular failing to score a goal, but he looped in three foul tries. Lookabaugh, lanky center, led the winners with 11 points.

C. Bean of the Moorefield lads was high with six points on three goals. Moorefield failed to score in the opening canto and made only seven points during the first half. With Ridgeley dousing its lineup with subs they were able to garner ten more markers, but the game was put "on ice" early by the Rampagers of Ridgeley.

Boden, Mrs. Knight Reynolds, Mrs. Claude Scheffner, Mrs. Fay Mansfield, Mrs. Herbert Platt, Mrs. G. W. Shriner, Mrs. James Warden and Mrs. Arlet Hinzman.

Willie Hoppe Takes Eighth Straight Victory

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (AP)—Undefeated Willie Hoppe of New York registered his eighth straight victory tonight in the world's championship three cushion billards tournament, outscoring Paul Lewin of Chicago, 50 to 31, in 49 innings.

Lewin, appearing in his first title tourney, took a 6-4 lead on the champion early in the match but Hoppe spurted to tie the score at 9-all at the end of 15 innings.

Lewin matched Hoppe's eight points in the next three frames, but then the New Yorker moved ahead and soon had a comfortable lead. Each had a high run of four.

Dr. Alexander Paterson Is Taken by Death

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — Dr. Alexander H. Paterson, 62, professor of prosthetic dentistry in the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery of the University of Maryland since 1924, died today at University hospital after several months' illness.

In 1926-27 he was president of the Maryland State Dental Association

Eight Company G Men Transferred To Chestertown

To Join Medical Detachment Today; Two Examined after Trip to Virginia

Eight privates of Company G, One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, Rifles, formerly the local national guard unit, yesterday were transferred to the Medical Detachment, at Chestertown, Md., and leave by truck this morning for the journey to the Eastern Shore to take over their new assignments.

Capt. Randolph Millholland, announced that the following men, all of whom enlisted with the local company Sunday, February 2, are being transferred:

Melvin D. Redhead, 301 Massachusetts avenue.

Jesse H. Shadwell, 128 Humbird street.

Delphin J. Uplinger, 416 Virginia avenue.

Morgan C. Winner, Long, Md.

Theodore Twigg, Hyndman, Pa.

Francis E. Weber, 846 Greene street.

Strair P. Youngblood, 230 Humbird street.

Wayne A. Riggleman, 702 Princeton street.

It was announced at the armory that because of the fact that the local company was at full strength when the eight men were listed and that the medical detachment at Chestertown did not have enough men it was necessary to make the transfer which reduced the number of enlisted men in Company G from 153 to 145. The One Hundred and Transportation Company will transport the men to Chestertown.

Two members of Company G, who were unable to be present for the medical examination, which was conducted by four United States Army officers here Monday, were to Winchester, Va., yesterday and successfully passed tests. They are Supply Sergt. Ellwood N. Brant, of Ridgeley, W. Va., and Private Wilbert T. Berry, of 32 North Lee street.

The regular routine of drills prevailed yesterday at the state armory and approximately twenty men, a majority of whom reside outside of Cumberland, remained at the Second Mechanic drill shed over night.

MRS. INEZ SHAVER WANTS TO LOCATE MEMBERS OF FAMILY

An Ithaca, N. Y., woman who lost track of her family yesterday requested court house officials to tell what they could do in tracking down her missing relatives.

The request was made by Mrs. Inez Shaver, of R. D. 5, Ithaca, N. Y., in a letter to Robert Jackson, county clerk, says her family lived at 621 Thomas street, Cumberland, for a while and later in Frostburg for about three years.

Mrs. Shaver is asking for information in regard to Mrs. Elizabeth A. Shaver and Frederick E. Shaver in particular, declaring that "it is very, very important that she hear of her family as soon as possible."

To her best recollections, Mrs. Shaver family moved to this locality around 1906 and departed around 1915. Jackson would greatly appreciate any clues that might help the New York woman in solving the problem.

SIX CHRONIC PATIENTS TAKEN TO INFIRMARY AT COUNTY HOME

Six patients were transferred yesterday from Memorial hospital to the infirmary at the Allegany County Home for the Aged which was formally opened Sunday.

Two of the patients had been in the county home previous to the installation of the infirmary. The other four were charity patients who were admitted to the hospital during the past year or so. All of the cases were of a chronic nature or incident to old age.

The transfer will relieve the crowded condition at the hospital to some extent. The fact that the cases were chronic ones caused the patients stay at the hospital for long periods of time.

One man had been at the hospital for 635 days. Another for 365 days and the rest ranged from forty-four to 169 days. All together the six patients used 1,360 days of hospitalization which kept six beds from being used for patients who would in the normal hospital routine have been discharged in from two weeks to a month.

The new infirmary at the county home will do much to solve the problem of chronic cases due to old age, it was said by hospital attaches.

Mrs. James Jeffries Dies of Injuries

BURBANK, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP) — Mrs. Frieda Jeffries, 60, wife of the former world heavyweight champion, James J. Jeffries, died last night shortly after she was struck by an automobile.

Jeffries was at a lodge dinner in Santa Monica at the time. Friends said he almost collapsed when informed of his wife's death. They had been married thirty - six years. Jeffries met her in New York when he was on tour as champion.

The driver of the automobile that struck Mrs. Jeffries was released pending an inquest.

THE DAILY STORY

UPSET

They Thought He Was Someone Else, and So Did He When the Bullets Began To Whiz Around His Head

By BETTY BUCK

"If we don't get some good replacements soon we will be entirely unable to hold up our end of this show!" Maj. Plankton testily snapped to no one in particular. He and Lt. Manville were alone in the isolated R. A. F. office somewhere in Surrey. "Good lord! We started off with a bang, and what happens? First Lancelotte goes, then Twilling, Granderson, Pete Templeton . . . all aces!"

"I guess that no one is an ace in this war, Major," Manville hazarded. "Most of the lads who started out with our gang this time would have been aces in the last unpleasantness—but this is another war entirely!"

"These planes can almost fly themselves, that's true!" Plankton snapped. "It still takes a level head to handle them . . . now, where in thunderation is that American who's due to arrive?"

"Ginty is supposed to bring him up in the supply truck from London this evening, sir," Manville remembered. "Maybe he's had a time getting out of the city. There was quite a heavy show there last night, you know—all the streets about the supply dump are likely to be closed off."

Maj. Plunkton pulled at the lobe of his ear and looked out through the cleared space where his gloved hand had swept the steam from the window. Sounds were coming from the general direction of the hangars.

"Hop down and see if that's the American, like a good fellow!" he commanded his aide. "See that he gets a dinner and then send him in to me. We'll need him for our patrol tonight!"

Roe Dilling had walked most of the miles out from London that afternoon because there was no other means of transportation. He meant to get in the fun while it lasted . . . and it was a long way from Arcadia, Kas., to the unmapped spot in Surrey where he knew his brother had come to join up!

A silent knot of men, most of them youngsters no more than his own 21 years, met him at the edge of the clearing as he trudged in through the fog-laden dusk of winter. The uncertainty he felt as to his qualifications vanished at the first greeting. It seemed that he was not only welcome, but word had already gotten on ahead that he was coming.

"It's pretty fine of you, Maj. Plankton, to take me on pronto like this," he modestly admitted later to the head of the base when he had answered the summons to an interview. "I hardly expected to get into things so fast!"

The major grinned a wry grin and looked him over speculatively.

"You'll get your chance tonight, because you're going out on a little picnic with the boys across the channel. Let Manville take you out to the hangar and give you a fast checkup."

Roe was puzzled, but, he didn't remonstrate. If the Major wanted to risk a valuable Hurricane in the hands of an amateur who had put in about 40 hours of solo in an old crate at the Arcadia Airport, who was he to argue? That was what he'd bummed his way over to do, and it looked as though fate had been good to him!

The Patrol's job, he discovered, was to fly back and forth over the channel and intercept bombing squadrons from the east as they flew high and fast toward London with their deadly cargoes. After a half hour's instruction from Manville on the handling of the Hurricane, Roe climbed into the ship assigned to him on the line.

The first surge of the plane as Roe pulled back the throttle almost jerked his head off. Planes built to fly at five miles a minute were not like the planes he had been flying!

Somehow he managed to keep in touch with the ghostly crew on both sides as they lifted up above the clouds in a swift series of spirals and headed away toward the channel. Bright moonlight was up there.

He didn't even see the first enemy.

Long, phosphorescent ribbons of tracer bullets streamed from the leading planes before he saw the answering ribbons from something ahead. Enemy fighters! Roe saw a smallish dot rapidly swelling into a rapier-like fighter in his gunsights. He pressed his finger on the button that fired his tandem machine guns, and the dot flamed suddenly and spiraled downward.

The rest of the patrol was nightmarish. For a full four hours he kept pace with the other 11 Hurricanes, and followed them down to the concealed field. By then, the speed and ease of handling of the plane was familiar. He even rolled to a smooth stop almost in perfect alignment with the formation.

"Nice going," McCrory!" the helmeted Manville complimented him as he climbed unsteadily out of his plane and stood leaning against the left wing. "Three to your credit the first night out! You didn't do better than that all the time you fley in the Spanish war, I'll wager!"

Roe wrinkled his brow. "I never was in Spain, Lieutenant," he admitted.

"But you're Jan McCrory, aren't you? Haven't you got 28 planes to your credit? G. H. Q. called and said they were sending you down."

Roe smiled wearily but happily. "I'm green, the record is just three, and the name is Roe Dilling, Lieutenant . . . but you just wait!" he predicted. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Ice, Hot Water Bags Helpful, Doctor Asserts

Scientific Research Proves Value of Cold and Hot Applications

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Do hot water bags or electric pads do any good? Does an ice bag help a headache?

The skeptic finds reasons for scofing at these practices. The heat from a hot water bag, he says, only heats up the superficial layers of the skin—so how can it help a pain way down deep in your stomach? And the same with the ice bag on the head—how can it help the ache in the brain that comes from a congestion of blood vessels following and evening out?

But in the meantime, in spite of the scoffer, the great mass of mankind keeps putting on the ice bag and the electric pad wherever and whenever there is a pain and seems to believe that they help.

And mankind in its way is right, and the scoffer, with his brilliant reasoning is wrong—so say the latest investigations of science. The scoffer just doesn't know enough facts. Human tissues may not be the best conductors of heat or cold but they have some conducting properties nevertheless.

Relieves Throbbing

Dr. William Bierman and Dr. Mae Friedlander, reporting to the American Congress of Physical Therapy, reported observations on a patient from whom a brain tumor had been removed. It was possible to insert a thermocouple into the frontal part of the brain and they found that when an ice cap was placed on the forehead the brain was cooled to a depth of two inches a degree and a half Fahrenheit. This would be enough to have an effect on the blood vessels and relieve the throbbing.

Heat applied to the surface of the abdomen has been shown to penetrate the internal organs. It produces its soothing effect first from the influence of heat on the sensory nerve endings and then on the blood vessels and finally on the movements — spasms — of the stomach and intestines.

Drafts and Tissues

Drafts also affect the temperature of tissues far below the surface. We are inclined to believe that drafts bring discomfort either from only a reflex action or because of sensitiveness on the part of the individual. But these researches show that a cool draft directed on the calf cools the muscles beneath an much as eleven degrees. This certainly would be enough to induce muscular rheumatism and stiffness anud soreness. An ice bag applied to the calf lowers the temperature of the muscles underneath twenty-six degrees Fahrenheit.

The effect of the external application of heat and cold is physiologically exactly the same — both dull nerve endings, and cause identical changes in the blood vessels. The body, however, can stand a greater range of cold temperatures than heat and it is probable there is a greater future in the use of cold for therapeutic purposes.

Means of Helping Children Overcome Handicaps Is Discussed by Dr. Myers

By GARRY MYERS, Ph.D.

You and I get a vast deal of inration from children and adults o are victorious over handicaps. t long ago I visited in a sight ving class of the public schools Joplin, Mo. There I saw chilen with very little vision learning gular lessons from books in large int. Everything the teacher wrote the board was about three times e usual size. So were the pages e copied on the typewriter or the ges the child typed himself. By e way, the large type used for ht saving classes is wholesome all young children. Parents and achers who buy or select typewrit- for children should choose large pe.

All writing and printing in the hool was large even in classes here children were doing regular hool work. I wish teachers of ung children would print and write and encourage the child to do e same. Fortunately, in nearly all imary grades in the public schools theUnited States, teachers and ildren print. They call it manuript writing. It is regular print expt for a few letters like a or g hich are too hard to print. These e a simplified form of conventionscript.

Also in Joplin I visited a special ass for crippled children. How ppy they were. One boy of about unable to walk, sat in a wheel air, making a thing of beauty th his hands. He had about the eeriest face of any in the room. nother boy, 15, suffering from thritis for years, could still stand d walk. He was making a beautiful design for a Christmas card, for ock printing. I can still see his smile in my memory as he looked up at me and talked so attractively. He was described as very bright. As I left that room with the lovely supervisor and another public spirited citizen who "goes about doing good," I learned of a young woman in her twenties, of that city, chained with arthritis from her childhood, who had graduated from a university, and who is called upon by the leading clubs of the city to review books for them.

In that room also were two children with bad hearts. Such children look perfectly well and whole, of course, and they are often misunderstood. Since they look to well and strong, they are sometimes dubbed sissies by their playmates because they are forbidden to enter the usual vigorous play. Some times, rather than endure the ridicule, they will venture into vigorous fun—sometimes tragically.

In spite of medical inspection in our schools, an occasional child is dubbed as dull or lazy. Perhaps he is punished for inattention and fails in reading, spelling or other school work because he cannot clearly hear and see. I wish the vision and hearing of such children were checked and rechecked. Dullness of seeing, hearing, like physical ills of the heart, may follow children's diseases like measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. Let me entreat parents to have the doctor check on their children several times over a period of a few months following their recovery from any such illness, however light the illness seemed to be.

The kindest thing we can do for any child or adult with a handicap is to treat him as nearly as possible like any other person. He is happiest when we treat him so but annoyed at us when we say or do anything to remind him that he is different.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you like to have children memorize brief selections of good literature?

A. Yes; I wish the school would bring back this good practice, but give the child a wide range of selections to choose from to learn by heart.

AP Feature Service

For a man who avowedly would rather be a master of fox hounds than a cabinet minister, Lord Halifax, new British ambassador to the United States, has had a complex public career. To call him by his full name—Edward Frederick Lindley Wood, Third Viscount Halifax and First Baron Irwin of Kirby Underdale, plus a few initials—he has since 1910 been a member of parliament, undersecretary for colonies, president of the (cabinet) board of education, minister of agriculture, viceroy to India, chancellor of Oxford, secretary of state for war, lord privy seal, leader of the House of Lords, lord president of the council, and foreign secretary. He has been an athlete despite a crippled left arm, and is a man of solid action and deep religious beliefs. The Yorkshire (England) Post called him "a man of absolute integrity whom Americans can unreservedly trust."

Case of Tyranny By Mother-in-Law Brings Advice

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

I may exaggerate when I say that not one of the hideous contraptions used in modern warfare is more to be dreaded than the power that an invalid, or a pretended invalid, can use in subduing a household. But you get my idea.

Time after time a protesting member of such a household will write, begging me to recommend a means of escape from sickbed tyranny. Not that the tyrant is always confined to a sickbed, by any means.

You all know the type of person, none too lovable, none too intelligent, who has succeeded in dominating a family merely by adopting a minor affliction and always referring to us, affectionately and possessively, as "my nerves" or "my headaches."

In the case of an unfortunate young husband who wrote to me the other day, the human obstacle in the way of a free and happy domestic life is a mother-in-law whose eyes have bothered her. At least, that is the way you or I might speak of it. But let me put the case before you:

Owns Everything

"We have been married five years," writes the young man who has so aroused by sympathy, "and were perfectly happy until my father-in-law died a year later. My tender-hearted little wife, an only daughter, wanted her mother to come to live with us. I made no objection, although since she is an able-bodied woman, still in her fifties, I thought she might make a life for herself. She came. And from the day she came, she has owned us, owned ourselves, our house, our two babies, everything that belongs to us.

"She makes the plans. If one of us disagrees, she begins to talk about going blind, a trick that my wife always falls for. In fact, the woman play-acts about those eyes of hers, which I really think are as good as mine, until she has enslaved all of us, including myself, though I, at least, am not a willing slave. We have no freedom in our home, no real happiness. Can you, Miss Fairfax, deliver us?"

We'll pass over the fact that this mother-in-law, since she is neither crippled nor impoverished, should not have come to live in her daughter's home, though it's possible for an older woman to be a tactful and even beneficient member of a young household. Speaking merely of the fact that she has used a case of eye-strain to build up a despotic position in this household, menacing her daughter's happiness, perhaps even the marriage itself, I would say:

The Weak Link

An open conflict with the mother-in-law is inadvisable. But the weak link in this unhappy family chain seems to me to be the young wife. It is she who must be reinforced, I think her husband should get her away from home, give her as nice a little vacation as he can possibly afford, even if it's only a weekend. He should show a sympathetic understanding of her love for her mother. But he should frankly explain to her the danger they are in and convince her that he is going to be inflexibly firm, and that she must join him in managing his own family and his own house whatever the mother-in-law's views may be.

I strongly hope that this may not lead to tears and scenes, but even if it does, there is no other way. When the mother-in-law sees that her power is gone, she will probably move away and leave the family in peace.

Otherwise, the older woman's power will steadily increase, a situation that I have been duplicated only too often. Heaven grant that this young family may achieve its freedom!

Bucknell Event Speakers Will Be Heard on Radio

Admiral and Author Will Speak on American Youth

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. — Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations, and Kenneth Roberts, author of "Northwest Passage," will discuss "What America Expects of Its Youth In 1941" an an MBS broadcast at 10:30 p. m. Wednesday.

They will speak at a New York dinner celebrating the ninety-fifth Charter Day celebration of Bucknell university, one of 100 such dinners being held in the United States.

New faces for old—that's the story of plastic surgery told on Doctors at Work (WJZ-NBC 10:30 p. m.). The science was one of the few benefits mankind gained from the last war.

Nineteen-year-old blond June Brady, who made such a hit as an impersonator on Maj. Bowes's program, is Fred Allen's special guest (WABC-CBS 9, west 12). She'll be remembered for singing a popular song in the voices of Greta Garbo!, Katherine Hepburn, Lew Lehr, Mae West, Martha Ray and Bing Crosby.

Brian in Old Favorite

Jack Arthur, "Echoes of New York" M. C. (WJZ-NBC 7:30) presents Donald Brian, Broadway veteran who created the role of Prince Danilo in the first American production of "The Merry Widow" in 1907. Brian and Kay Lorraine, Echoes leading lady, will sing the famous waltz.

Henry Clay, a hot-headed young congressman from Kentucky, almost single-handed pushed the United States into the War of 1812. The United States almost lost it because it was not ready. Clay never forgot his lesson. At 73 he began a great battle, again almost single-handed, to stave off the Civil war until the Union was ready. Again he won.

The story of Clay's desperate struggle will be dramatized on Cavalcade of America (WEAF-NBC 7:30) with Ray Collins in the lead role.

Jacket and Princess Dress

Marian Martin

PATTERN 9650

Places to go? Be smartly ready in this spirited 'teen age jacket-ensemble by Marian Martin. Pattern 9650 has a clean-cut, buoyant, slim look you'll love. Best of all those graceful princess lines are so simple to make with the Sew Chart for guidance. You might accent your supple waist by rows of buttons. The sweetheart neckline is beguilingly feminine, especially if you trim it with pretty braid or lace, using more of the edging at the short sleeves. Let the tailored jacket match or contrast, and have it collarless or with trim revers. Start this outfit as soon as possible.

Pattern 9650 may be ordered only in junior miss sizes, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. Size 13, dress alone, requires 2⅝ yards 39 inch fabric and 2 yards trim; dress and jacket, 2⅝ yards 39 inch fabric and 1⅛ yards contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

It's ready—our new Marian Martin Pattern Book for 1941! Order a copy today and do your Spring shopping without going further than the mailbox. For here are dozens of smart, easily-made styles shown in realistic colors. Here are attractive, new-season wardrobes for every member of the family; for every occasion from morning to night. There are tips on the newest silhouettes and fabrics, too. This indispensible home fashion guide is yours for just fifteen cents! A pattern is also fifteen cents. Book and pattern together cost twenty-five cents.

Wed Seventy Years

POCOMOKE CITY, Md., Feb. 4 (AP)—Captain and Mrs. Henry Clay Marshall, Worcester county's "grand old couple," celebrate their seventieth wedding anniversary tomorrow.

The captain, 95, and Mrs. Marshall, 88, still are active, and are keeping house here as they have for thirty-three years.

They said they planned no special ceremonies, but would spend the day with three of their four children.

The "secret" of a long, happy marriage, they say, is "never to worry."

1. Ostermoor Flexible-Cable-Coil Innerspring, constructed to give you the utmost in resilient springiness, is guaranteed against structural defects.
2. Each coil in the Ostermoor Flexible-Cable-Coil Innerspring functions independently of every other, yet all coils act together in perfect unison.
3. Ostermoor Felt Protection Pad serves as a strong, quilted cotton foundation for thick layers of Ostermoor felt, and prevents the felt from packing down between the coils.
4. Ostermoor Felt Protection Pad also prevents your feeling the springs through the felted cotton.
5. Ostermoor Reinforced Side Border and Ostermoor Flexible Cable spring edge actually do keep the sides of the Ostermoor nest, smooth and smart looking.
6. New Style Handles—riveted on—cannot pull out. Easy to reach; easy to grasp. Scientifically spaced.
7. Ostermoor Quality Felted Cotton insures you of sleeping comfort on the softest kind of a mattress.
8. Actually Air Ventilated. The moment you lie down on the Ostermoor mattress, fresh air passes through it—inside—from one side to the other.
9. Can Be Folded—from side to side, or end to end—without injury to the spring construction.

Hampshire County Office Building Approved by WPA

State Headquarters Release $28,084 for Court House Annex

ROMNEY, W. Va., Feb. 4—The state Works Projects Administration headquarters has announced the approval of a $28,084 project for the construction of a county office building in Romney and performing incidental work, including construction of sidewalks.

The building will be known as the court house annex and will be constructed on the lot in the rear of the court house on High street. The whole structure will cost approximately $40,000. Sponsored by the Hampshire county court, the project will cost the county $13,468, which will be secured by means of a bond issue approved at the general election in November.

The building is intended primarily to relieve congested conditions in the court house and provide office space for county and other governmental agencies now are in quarters outside the court house, for which the county court is required to pay rent. It will house the offices of the board of education, the Extension division, the Agricultural Conservation program, the Farm Security Administration, the Health department, the Department of Public Assistance and the public library.

Work will be started immediately on securing the building material, which will be native limestone.

W. Va. Legislature Is Asked To Fix Limit on Political Contributions

'Little Hatch Act' Would Penalize Coercion of Public Employes

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 4 (AP)—The administration asked the legislature today to fix a limit on political contributions in a "little Hatch act" which would penalize stiffly coercion of public employes on behalf of parties, factions or candidates.

The measure, the third of Governor Neely's bills to be introduced, purposely left blank the top amount anyone might contribute to a political party or candidate.

The Governor's office said the legislature would be asked to fill in the sum.

Introduction of the measure for strengthening the state's corrupt practices act was the main business of the day, although both houses made ready to vote on a bill which would require minor political parties to file their platforms at least thirty days before seeking a place on the election ballot.

Bill Backed by Legion

The bill was backed by the American Legion after its successful 1940 drive to bar the Communist party from the ballot. Senate and House have similar drafts at the passage stage.

The House with little debate approved 89 to 2 and sent to the Senate a bill backed by the state treasurer and auditor to require daily itemized statements of departmental receipts and pave the way for what sponsors said would be the first audit of these receipts in the state's history.

It was explained that departments are now keeping the statements but there has never been a law to require them to do so.

The administration-backed political control bill is aimed at fitting the federal Hatch act to the state and adds eight new sections to the existing corrupt practices statute.

Soliciting Outlawed

It would make it unlawful to solicit 'contributions from any nonelective salaried employe of the state government or any of its subdivisions or to coerce or intimidate such employes into making such contributions."

The bill would cover intimidation or coercion of employes into working for candidates or parties. Voluntary contributions and voluntary political activities would not be barred.

One section refers to the present statute limiting the expenditures of candidates during campaigns by decreeing that violation of the expense limitation would make the offender ineligible to hold public office for five years. Conviction while in office would mean automatic dismissal.

The bill would make it unlawful to promise jobs as rewards for political activity.

It would bar all persons or firms doing business with the state making political contributions. That section was aimed at penalizing "kickbacks" on public contracts. The corrupt practices act now has a section prohibiting corporations from making any contributions.

Penalties Stiff

Penalties under the measure would be a maximum of a $1,000 fine and a year in jail, or both.

After introduction by President Randolph in the Senate and Speaker Arnold in the House, the copies of the measure were referred to the respective Judiciary committees.

Evidence of intention to step up activity came from a Senate caucus in which it was agreed to hold night committee sessions whenever necessary to expedite bills.

The Senate Education committee held a meeting after the session to get to work on the administration's measure for electing county school board members on non-partisan ballots. The Judiciary likely will start tomorrow on the measure for a state labor relations commission, and House committees are expected to follow suit.

Holt Appointee Submits 9-Point Brief to Senate

Neely Candidate Mak Short Statement in Unprecedented Mix-Up

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Clence Martin submitted to the Sate Elections committee today n grounds on which he based claim for a West Virginia Sen seat vacated by M. M. Neely to come governor.

His argument and a brief sta ment by his rival appointee, Jose Rosier, Fairmont college presid named by Neely, closed hearings the unprecedented case with out ing and incoming governors ea claiming the right of appointme

Martin based his case genera upon contentions that Neely co not step from the Senate to governor's office without creati an interval of time and that in th interval former Governor Hon A. Holt was empowered to appo him as Neely's successor.

Argument Summarized

The Martinsburg attorney, form president of the American Bar sociation, summarized his argume in these points:

A—Neely could not fill both offices, as senator and governor.

B—When Neely resigned as Senator, the resignation wa final and according to its terms "precisely at midnight" January 12, was effective in Holt's term as governor.

C—When Holt received the resignation, it was his right and duty to fill the office, and appointment of Martin to take effect in the future was good.

D—Martin's appointment by Holt was final and irrevocable.

E—Holt was governor until his successor qualified.

F—If either oath as governor taken by Neely prior to midnight January 12 was valid, it vacated his office as senator.

G—If both were invalid, they constituted evidence of abandonment of office as senator.

H—It was Neely's duty to file a certified copy of his oath of office with the Secretary of State, and he did not become governor until the certificate was filed at 12:40 a. m. January 13.

I—Neely could not resign as senator so that his resignation would be effective during his term as governor.

Cites Cases from Other States

His presentation of citations from other states in support of one another of his arguments prompted a long off-the-record discussion of legal technicalities. Principally interested with Martin in informdiscussions of legal points were Chairman Connally (D-Texas) of the committee and Senator Hatch (D-NM) who acted as chairman in today's sessions.

Rosier, in his brief statement it required only two or three minutes—told the committee Neely suggested his appointment because "Governor Neely wanted somebody to carry out his policies for the remainder of his term. x x x

"I had no ambitions for this office, but I accepted his appointment because he and I have the same political philosophy," Rosier continued.

"When I agreed to accept," he added, with a smile, "I had no idea I would become involved in such an exhibition as this."

Earlier, the committee heard testimony of disagreements between former Governor Holt and Clarence Meadows, attorney-general of West Virginia.

Holt Answers Meadows

The hearings, closed a week ago had been reopened to give holt an opportunity to reply to assertions by Meadows that Holt had asked him to appoint "an eminent Charleston attorney" to write an opinion favorable to Holt's appointee.

Holt asserted he recommended appointment of Robert S. Spilman Sr. as a special assistant attorney general to act in the case in an attempt to "avoid drawing" the state attorney-general's office into the controversy.

He declared he acted under state law authorizing appointment of a special assistant attorney general when deemed necessary by the governor and attorney-general.

The former governor also asserted that he "didn't want to put Mr. Meadows in the position of giving me advice that possibly might be offensive to his chief for the next four years," and added:

"He (the attorney-general) couldn't claim to be my official attorney one day and a few days later turn up as the counsel for the opposing party. x x x He can't expect to represent both sides in a case."

Ignorant of Spilman's Views

He said that when he first sought legal advice from Spilman, a Charleston attorney, he did not know what Spilman's views were in the case.

"If Mr. Spilman had advised me I had no right to make an appoint-

LaSalle Cagers

counted for four points on two buckets, was the only other Beall basketeer to gather more than one field goal.

The Explorers showed a marked improvement over recent games in their abaility to work the ball in to the baskets for close shots and also displayed more determination, with the exception of the third stanza, on the defense.

Elk Garden Loses

Beall, on the other hand, after banging away at the nets with little success in the early stages of the game, seemed to give up after their third-stanza rally came within five points of tying the Blue and Gold. The Finzelemen showed fine team play and fighting spirit for only the first four minutes of the second half.

In the preliminary, Homer Brooks, Elk Garden (W.Va.) High floormen were nosed out 33-32 by the LaSalle Jayvees, with Bernard McGann of the Jayvees dropping in the winning point on a free toss in the last few seconds of play.

The West Virginians staged an uphill battle, being on the short end of a 10-3 count at the quarter, 18-11 at the half and 28-17 at the three-quarter mark. Jim Dean's foul toss and Cecil Custer's field goal, which tied the score at 32-all in the last minute of play, was the climax of the uphill struggle.

Dean and Harry Clark, with 18 points between them, paced Elk Garden's attack, while Tommy Ford topped the winners with 11 counters. The summaries:

Weirton Employes Pledge Uninterrupted Production

WEIRTON, W. Va., Feb. 4. (AP)—A pledge to help keep up uninterrupted production of defense materials was made today by the Weirton Steel employes' representatives who disclosed that for several months they had been negotiating for "equitable adjustment" of wage scales.

"We believe our present wage negotiations will be settled without threats of strikes or walkouts," the employes' statement said. "At a time such as this, when the nation's steel industry should be producing all it possibly can for national defense, we pledge our support in helping to keep this production from being interrupted."

Weirton Steel, a subsidiary of National Steel, operates plants at Weirton and Steubenville, O. The present negotiations include discussions of overtime pay as interpreted under the wage-hour and Walsh-Healey acts.

President T. E. Millsop of the company confirmed negotiations were in progress. Te said "no definite decision has been arrived at."

Rally Fails To Follow Through As Stocks Encounter Resistance

Transfers Dwindle to 352,740 Shares; Smallest Turnover in Months

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (AP)—Stocks again encountered selling resistance in today's market after a feeble forenoon rally failed to follow through.

For a while steels, rails, coppers, rubbers, oils and specialties exhibited gains of fractions to a point or so. Then prices began to wilt and, at the close, irregularity was the rule.

Transfers dwindled to 352,740 shares for the full proceedings, smallest turnover for a full session since Sept. 16. They compared with 491,165 Monday.

Rails kept their balance as mounting traffic and revenues seemed assured over coming months.

United States Steel and Bethlehem emerged with gains of ¼ of a point each. Improvement was retained by Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Goodrich, United Aircraft, American Emelting, International Nickel, Standard Oil of N. J., Westinghouse, Union Carbide, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Bath Iron Works and Paramount.

Losers included General Electric, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, American Telephone, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft and Owens-Illinois.

Volume in the curb was around 87,000 shares versus 87,000 Monday.

Marital Comedy Opens At Maryland Today

What is "This Thing Called Love"?

It's a comedy with Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas co-starred. The supporting cast includes Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn, Gloria Holden.

It's the forthcoming Columbia attraction at the Maryland theater.

"This Thing Called Love" is a wacky uproarious marital comedy in which Rosalind insists upon being the platonic bride of Melvyn Douglas, who loves her madly. She loves him just as madly, and she doesn't want their marriage to go on the rocks. She therefore insists—to Melvyn's indignation and disgust—that they learn to live together peacefully in the same house before they even attempt to share the same room.

John Kirby and Band On Strand Stage Today

The Strand presents today and tomorrow another famous name band—that of John Kirby.

Kirby is on tour direct from the Onyx Club, rendezvous of the "swing intellectuals," where he was held over for the unparalleled stay of over a year and a half. Then followed a limited engagement at the Famous Door, after which he returned to the Onyx Club by popular demand. While at the Onyx, he was featured on coast-to-coast broadcasts on the CBS networks.

Kirby's vocalist is Maxine Sullivan, who made swinging "Loch Lomond" a national issue. During her engagement here, she will sing "Loch Lomond" and several new numbers.

The screen show will be "The Girl in the News," a Twentieth Century-Fox picture starring Margaret Lockwood.

Bob Crosby Starred At New Liberty

"Let's Make Music," Bob Crosby's initial venture into films, is now showing at the New Liberty theater.

Bob, who is Bing Crosby's youngest brother, plays himself in the story and carries the romantic interest with Jean Rogers, whose efforts to keep Elisabeth Risdon, as her aunt Malvina, from becoming a night club entertainer lead her first into a quarrel with the band leader, and then into romance.

The story revolves around the amusing adventures of Malvina, a lovable old music teacher. The principal dissatisfied with student disinterest in Malvina's classes of music appreciation, demands she find some way to stimulate interest before the next semester.

Encouraged by her pretty niece, Malvina writes a school song to vindicate herself, but the school's highly swing-minded band will have none of it. Indignant, her determined niece mails it to a New York publishing firm—and from this moment on the story hits a dizzy pace.

Ginger Rogers Film Heads Garden Bill

Ginger Rogers is starred in "Bachelor Mother," opening today at the Garden theater.

Brought back by popular request, the picture also features David Niven, Charles Coburn and Frank Albertson.

Also on the Garden program is "Margie," starring Tom Brown, Nan Grey and Mischa Auer.

'Billy the Kid in Texas' On Embassy Screen

Heading the program at the Embassy theater is "Billy the Kid in Texas," starring Bob Steele.

The co-feature is "Orphans of the North, an action picture of life in Alaska.

Big Special Show Sunday Midnight

Miss Babs Flannery, one of the many beautiful girls appearing in Studio Scandals, unusual thirty-five people road show playing the Maryland Theater in Cumberland for 3 days, opening with a big special show Sunday Midnight, Feb. 9th., and plays all day Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 10th and 11th. By all means try to see the big special midnight show Sunday, as this will be a special big performance, full of real midnight surprises. Don't miss this special performance if you can possibly attend. This out of the ordinary stage show features glamorous beauties and sensational artists returned from a triumphant 20,000 mile European tour.

One of the many unusual acts in the show is the famous Youman Brothers, the act that proved such a sensation at the Roxy in New York that they were requested to play for President Roosevelt. These three boys, by the use of various musical instruments, perfectly imitate the music of all of America's leading name bands. When they play the music of Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman, Kay Kyser, and all the others, they sound exactly like the bands themselves. If you want to thrill of hearing all of your name bands at one time, don't miss the Youman Brothers, the only act of its kind in the world. Music and dance lovers will thrill at their skill.

The Lucky Girls, beautiful dancing stars of Studio Scandals, have time and again been acclaimed the most beautiful and talented girls on tour. The famous Billy Rose is said to have praised the girls as being the most beautiful and talented he had ever seen. The New York Times wrote, "Miss Evelyn Willard, appearing with the Lucky Girls, has one of the world's most perfect figures."

Concerning the show's starring comedy team, Edison and Louise, the London Times wrote, "The funniest act ever seen here." The famous Ted Lewis, thought so much of their talent that he personally presented them in America's leading theaters.

The entire large cast has a great variety of such top notch talent. Studio Scandals plays the Maryland Theater for three days, opening with a special show Sunday midnight, Feb. 9th., and plays all day Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 10th and 11th. The big midnight show Sunday will be full of special midnight surprises, so don't miss this special performance if possible to attend.

Boxing Probe Is Sought in Pennsylvania

Senators Charge Gamblers Control State Commission

Announce Forthcoming Heavyweight Bout between Louis and Dorazio

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 4 (AP)—Two state senators asked the Pennsylvania legislature today to investigate what they charged is "open connivance" between gamblers and the state athletic commission.

At the same time, they denounced the forthcoming heavyweight title bout between champion Joe Louis and Gus Dorazio. Philadelphia boxing fan, as a "flagrant violation of the commission's duty to the public and abuse of the unequal ability of the participants."

Senator H. Jerome Jaspan and Anthony J. Disilvestro, Philadelphia Democrats, charged in their legislative resolution that "Gambling interests more or less control boxing in Philadelphia with the knowledge of Commission Chairman Leon Rains."

They asserted that "fighters physically unfit for athletic contests have been ordered to participate, by the order of physicians, for the benefit of promoters and in some instances for the profit of professional gamblers."

At his Philadelphia office, Rains asserted that "Jaspan is after me because I refused him complimentary tickets." The chairman said that boxing in Philadelphia is now in its healthiest condition.

The Louis-Dorazio bout, scheduled for Feb. 17 in Philadelphia, is a public imposition on the public and should be called off," Jaspan told the legislature. "It will be suicide for Dorazio."

Rains, a former boxing promoter himself, replied that "Dorazio is as good as any of the present crop of heavyweights. He's beaten Al McCoy and Bob Pastor, both of whom went to Louis, and he dropped a close decision to Clarence Burman who was knocked out by Louis last May."

Basketball Tourneys Scheduled for Parsons and Moorefield, W. Va.

PARSONS, W. Va., Feb. 4—Section 15, Region 4 has been divided into two basketball tournaments, Class A to be held at Parsons and Class B to be held at Moorefield. All schools with a student body of 200 or more automatically come under Class A. All schools with a student body of less than 250 come under Class B unless they exercise their privilege of petitioning into Class A.

This plan has brought Parsons, Thomas, Davis and Franklin into Class A. Moorefield, Bayard, Petersburg, Circleville, Mathias and Wardensville come under Class B. The tournament at Parsons is scheduled for March 7 and 8. Two games will be played Friday night and two Saturday evening. Both sessions will begin at 7:30 p. m. Season tickets will be sold to adults and students.

English Colt Is Sent to Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 4 (AP)—Colorado Lad, sensation of the English turf last season, will receive his initial American training at Churchill Downs, Tom Young, track superintendent, announced today.

The British 3-year-old, which arrived at Boston yesterday, is en route to Lexington, Ky., where he will be quartered at Thomas Garth's farm until he is ready to start prepping for midsummer tests.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—Danny MacFayden will be pitching baseball for the Washington Senators this year, and the snapping judgement of many a fan probably has Clark Griffith classified as slightly balmy for signing this National League pensioner.

Griffith wasn't nicknamed "The Old Fox," however, because he couldn't tell a bargain from a can of corn, and not far beneath the surface are sound reasons for the acquisition of the thirty-four-year old right hander, and No. 1 among the reasons is the success Griffith has enjoyed with another reformed National Leaguer.

Dutch Leonard is the other fellow who wasn't good enough for the National League, and who was salvaged by Griffith from the Minors.

Dutch had been up with Brooklyn for four years, but hadn't had any luck to speak of, and besides that, every time he threw a ball a catcher would howl like he'd hit his finger with a hammer. That knuckler sure wrecked the receivers.

Anyway, he was shipped to Atlanta in 1936, and that's where Griffith found him. In 1939 he won 20 and lost eight for the Nats, and last year his record was 14 wins against 19 defeats, not too good, of course, but neither were the Senators.

It's rumored now that the Yankees would like to make a deal for Leonard. In fact, the deal might be made in self defense. Dutch on occasion has been a tough cookie for the Yankees with his dipsie doodler, and what he does to bats is a caution. They could save in broken bats alone enough to pay his salary.

Considering the luck he had with Leonard, it's highly possible that Griffith reasoned that just because MacFayden couldn't get them out fast enough in the National League was no reason why he couldn't get anybody out anywhere.

It might be pointed out right here that Danny originally was good old American League stock, but he'd been away from that circuit long enough to live it down. He served most of his American League time with the Red Sox, finally being shifted over to the Yankees before being pushed off into the National League.

The Reds got him on option from the Yanks, then returned him with thanks, and the Boston Bees immediately jumped in and got him on waivers.

Danny was a good pitcher with the Bees for three years, with an earned run average never higher than three. He slipped a little in 1939, and after the season went to Pittsburgh in a deal for pitcher Bill Swift and cash.

He was no ball of fire last year, and Frankie Frisch figured you can't win many pennants with 50-50 pitchers, so away Danny went, apparently to spend his declining baseball years in pasture.

The Senators have given him a new lease on life, however, and there is more than a bare chance that his fluffy "stuff" combined with the wisdom of years and the fact that American League batters haven't had a look at him in seven years might make him a valuable addition to the Washington staff.

And even if he doesn't make the grade, it wouldn't be a poor business deal on Griffith's part. He couldn't get him much cheaper than for nothing.

Infielders Led Easy Life At Plate in Past Years

Ball players who could field well, infielders we mean, could stick in the big leagues for a dozen years if they could muster a .250 batting average. That was all that was expected of second basemen, third basemen and shortstops not so many years ago. But in modern baseball the infielder who can't hit .300, or at least .290, is not sure of his job. Baseball is demanding that the boys hit as well as field.

A catcher could get away nicely with a big league salary if he hit .260 and could catch well, but time has run out for that kind, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." Club owners now look for batting strength behind the bat as they used to look for it from their first basemen and outfielders. No catcher who fails to hit .300 is rated as a good catcher this days.

North End Will Practice Tonight

Two practice sessions have been scheduled this week by the North End Social and Athletic Club basketball team. Coach Bill Keegan announced yesterday that the team will practice tonight at 8 o'clock and Thursday night at 8:15 o'clock on the SS. Peter and Paul court.

CHAMP JOCKEY KILLED

Thrown from his mount in the sixth race at Agua Caliente, Mexico, Earl Dew, 18, American jockey champion, was crushed under the churning hoofs of horses trailing him and died en route to the hospital. He had gone to the Mexican track to be honored for winning the 1940 riding title with 287 victories, and at the last moment he agreed to accept a few mounts before the ceremonies.

Petersburg Wallops Romney High Cagers By 42 to 21 Count

Frostburg Cagers Rout Shenandoah

Meyers Scores 26 Points at Mountaineers Score 91-40 Victory

FROSTBURG, Feb. 4 — With Johnny Meyers, Maryland's leading collegiate scorer tallying 26 points on 12 field goals and two fouls, the Frostburg State Teachers basketball team completed its sweep with the Shenandoah College outfit here tonight by romping to an easy 91-40 victory. Earlier in the season, Coach George Carrington's crew walloped the Virginians 82-36 at Shenandoah.

The visitors never had a chance once the game got underway, for when the whistle sounded the end of first-quarter, the Mountaineers leading by 18 points, the scoreboard showing 27-9. The count at halftime stood 41-23 while the figures at the end of the third session showed Frostburg 65, Shenandoah 37.

Joe Wagner, with 16 counters, and Ed Athey, with 13, were the next best for the winners, while Center Cooper was the whole show for the losers with 18 tallies. The lineups:

Notre Dame Will Choose Coach from Among Its Alumni

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 4 (AP)—Notre Dame will continue its policy of choosing its head football coach and athletic director from among its alumni, it was indicated tonight as speculation increased over the successor of Elmer F. Layden.

Layden, who had filled both assignments since 1934, resigned yesterday to become commissioner of the National Professional Football League. He was one of the Irish team's famous "Four Horsemen" seventeen years ago.

With the late Rockne's system apparently destined to continue, the names of four of his former pupils topped the list of possible candidates for the coaching job. They are Joe Boland, present line coach at Notre Dame; Lawrence (Buck) Shaw, mentor at Santa Clara university; Maurice (Clipper) Smith, Villanova coach, and Jim Crowley, coach at Fordham.

Crowley was anither member of the wamed backfield with which Layden performed and Boland has been Layden's line tutor.

LaSalle Cagers Ring Up Second Win over Beall

Explorers Register Eleventh Win of Season by 37-17 Score

Frostburg's Beall high basketball team, which had a seven-game win streak stopped by the LaSalle high Explorers last month in the Mountain city, bowed a second time to the local cage outfit last night on the SS. Peter and Paul school court here. The final score was 37-17.

The Explorers, in completing the sweep and thereby scoring their eleventh triumph in fourteen starts, broke on top with the first toot of the whistle and were never headed. Coach Pat Conway's quintet held a six-pint advantage at the end of the first period when the score stood 10-4, widened the margin to 22-8 at intermission and was leading 25-15 at the conclusion of the third period.

Although the Blue and Gold hoopmen captured the battle by a 20-point margin, they were impressive only in spots. It took them four minutes of the opening chapter to start their offense rolling and went scoreless for nearly six minutes in the third quarter after a but running Coach Eddie Finzel's aggregation off the floor with a 12 marker assault in the second period. The Explorers came back the final session with an impro passing and shooting attack to ou score the visitors 12 to two and i the game.

Boyle, Malloy Star

Dick Boyle and Vic Mallo sparked the winners' scoring machine with 22 counters between them, the former tallying 11 points on five dual-pointers and one of two singletons and the latter meshing three fielders and four of nine free chances for 10 tallies. Pivot-man Johnny Small bagged third-place honors with eight points on four buckets.

Center Jim Brode topped the losers with seven markers on three doubledeckers and one of four fouls, while Bob Allerdice, who ac

Jacobs Willing to Lend Joe Louis to U. S. Army

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—The heavyweight champion of the world probably will join the army at the end of this year, through the courtesy of Mike Jacobs. Mr. Jacobs does not appear on the United States payroll as a recruiting sergeant, but he does control Joe Louis, body (100 per cent) and soul (up to sixty per cent).

The deuce of boxing, as the boys call Uncle Mike, says he will be glad to do the government this favor.

"If Joe wins all his fights in 1941," remarked Mr. Jacobs, the other forenoon, "the army is welcome to him for a year. It will take me a year to dig up more opponents. By the time he checks out again, I will no doubt have a couple of valuable killers lined up for the boy to fight."

At army headquarters, they were so dumbfounded by Uncle Michael's generosity that nobody could think of anything to say, except that they probably will be able to find something for Louis to do when he volunteers.

No Contract with Uncle Sam

No contract has been drawn up between the United States and Uncle Mike as yet. Traditionally, Louis would split his army earnings four ways, cutting in Mr. Jacobs, Mr. John Roxborough, and Mr. Julian Black.

If the champion had joined up a year ago, he would also have had to cut in Mr. Joe Gould, Mr. James J. Braddock, Mr. Big Bill Duffy, and Mr. Owney Madden, the noted public enemy. All these characters owned a piece of Joseph until recently. However, Mr. Jacobs grew tired of paying them off and put an end to the nonsense, with the result that Mr. Gould, Mr. Braddock, Mr. Duffy, and Mr. Owney Madden will have absolutely no claim on the government at all, unless they join the army themselves.

This is all for the best. I have been figuring on a piece of scratch paper, and I find that if the government had to cut in seven of Louis's partners, there would be practically nothing left for Joe — not even cigarette money.

Of course, as Mr. Gould once pointed out, Mr. Louis doesn't smoke, so what does he need with cigarette money?

Actually, the chances are that the champion will have his army pay all to himself. Mr. Jacobs admits to a couple of other sources of income which will tide him over till Joe gets back. As for Mr. Black and Mr. Roxborough, they have stacked a few pennies away in the bank, and will do their best to support themselves during the champ's absence. Little does the world know of the sacrifices that are made in a crisis like this.

Louis himself is a willing recruit. "I'll join the army any time," he says. "I already sent in my questionnaire. They ain't called me yet, but I'll go when they say. If Mike don't have any more good fights for me by the end of the year, I'll volunteer. That's what I wanna do."

It's up to Conn and Nova

Which leaves the matter squarely up to Billy Conn and Lou Nova. If they fail to beat the champion this year, Joe will become Private Louis, U. S. A.

Conn and Nova are all that is left of the herd of contenders rounded up by the deuce of boxing in the last three years. Others will give Joe a workout for the price of a few months' victuals, but only Conn and Nova have a chance to beat him.

The Conn-Louis fight is already booked, for June. Nova meanwhile is planning to fight Max Baer and perhaps the winner of the fight between Buddy Baer and Tony Galento. Having rubbed out these dim threats, he will stand next in line. Should Conn make a good showing against Louis, Nova will meet Sweet William in the summertime, with the ultimate survivor to give Joe another fight in September.

And if Louis scales both these hurdles, he will be a man without a rival in his own country, free to give the army a year of his time and investigate the claim of this European prospect, Hitler, of whom they speak so highly.

It's a fact that Hitler and Louis rose to power about the same time. Matters would be greatly simplified if we could get both of them into one ring. Louis is willing. I will try to get in touch with the other guy's managers in the morning. What are they saving him for, anyway?

Dragons Will Play In Keyser Tonight

Interstate basketball league warfare will be resumed today by the Cumberland Dragons when they journey to Keyser to battle the Pepsi-Cola quint at 6:30 p. m. in a preliminary to the Potomac State-Shenandoah College game.

Due to a mixup in the schedule, it was announced that the game would be played in Cumberland but the locals agreed to stage the contest in Keyser. The Dragon team will leave at 5:30 p. m. from the Central Y. M. C. A.

The Dragons have won one game and lost one in league competition and will be angling for their tenth victory of the year and third in succession.

HONORED BY BASEBALL SCRIBES

Bob Feller (left), Cleveland Indians pitcher, and Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, display plaques presented to them at the annual dinner of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association in Manhattan. Feller, 22, designated the outstanding player of 1940, is the youngest man ever to receive the honor. Quinn, 71, received the tribute for almost half a century of service to baseball.

The Biscuit in Bronze

ARCADIA, Calif.—On Thursday at Santa Anita, the track that brought him his closing fame, Seabiscuit will see a life-sized likeness of himself in bronze.

The old campaigner will leave his seven kids at home up north, put on a one-horse parade, take another look at the track where he came close to winning three $100,000 races, and then head home again to the family.

Winner of thirty-three races and and all-time money record of $437,000, the valiant Biscuit hopes to put on another big show since he has always been a natural showman. Oddly enough, the only race horse so honored was his grandfather, Fair Play, which also happens to be Man-o-War's dad. This Fair Play statue stands on the Elmendorf Farm in Kentucky to mark his grave.

But Seabiscuit still remains the only horse in turf history to see his own statue and to hear the applause of all the thousands who will be on hand.

His Greatest Quality

I asked Charley Howard, his owner, what he thought Seabiscuit's greatest quality was.

"There are three outstanding factors that make a great race horse," Mr. Howard said. "They are speed, stamina and heart. They are vital essentials.

"Seabiscuit had all three. But I should say his main asset was heart. I've never seen a horse that wanted to win as badly. How he hated to be beaten!

"You may recall his second start in the $100,000 Handicap here at Santa Anita. First he stumbled and almost fell at the start. Then he ran into another mix-up through the first quarter. Before he could get going again he was at least sixteen lengths off the pace. You couldn't figure him with a chance. And then, given his opportunity to run, he raced the fastest half-mile ever known on any track to overtake the field.

"This terrific rush left him fighting it out with Stagehand. But he was spotting Stagehand thirty pounds and Stagehand had been forced into no such killing pace. Considtring all the circumstances, this was one of the greatest races of all turf history. It proved again not only the speed and stamina the Biscuit carried, but also the fighting heart that made him a champion."

Biscuit Thrills

Charley Howard could talk to you about the Biscuit by the hour. I doubt that any other owner ever loved a horse as much.

"You know," he said, "that Seabiscuit had already run thirty-eight races before I bought him. That's a lot of races for a young horse. And he traveled the country from coast to coast. He was a great traveler. All he wanted was another race.

"The greatest thrill he ever gave me was his last race. You may remembers that he had broken down the year before in his only 1939 start. Few believed then he would ever return to the track again. Tom Smith, his trainer, still had faith in the old fellow and when he came back to win the Handicap at last and also set a new track record, he brought me a day I'll never forget.

"Could he have gone on? I think so. But he had already done his share of racing with nearly ninety starts under his belt. Queerly enough his favorite horse was Kayak II. I think this was because he always respected Kayak—they usually stuck close in their workouts and refused to be outrun. Even in a workout, Seabiscuit always wanted to win."

In His Wake

With Seabiscuit retired and Kayak laid up with an injured tendon, Mr. Howard faces the next $100,000 Handicap with Mioland in tow, co-favorite with Challedon.

"Kayak never looked better before he pulled up lame and I had to withdraw him," owner Howard said today, "but you can be sure Mioland is a much better horse than he was last year. I know that Challedon in condition is a hard horse to beat. But he will have to be at his best."

"Here we have turfmen all over the landscape trying desperately to get some likely contender for the $100,000 race every year. Even as keen a turfman as Alfred Vanderbilt has been looking to this dream. But for the last four years Charley Howard has either had the winner or the runner-up.

He had the two favorites last March in Seabiscuit and Kayak. He has a star this time in Mioland. And looking ahead a bit he sees no reason why Mioland and Kayak will not be leading contenders a year from now.

His three-star specials, Seabiscuit, Kayak and Mioland have earned over $700,000 for the Howard stable in the last few years and two of these still have some time to go.

And there are the Biscuit kids coming along with their strain of Man o' War and Seabiscuit blood. Before many more years Charles S. Howard may have Santa Anita packed with the bronze statues of his history makers—North American Newspaper Alliance.

BASKETBALL PLAYER RESTS 69 PER CENT OF TIME, COACH SAYS

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 4 (AP)—Why pity the perspiring basketball player who rushed to and fro—actually he's resting sixty-nine per cent of the time.

Statistics kept by Tom Scott, coach of the Warrensburg, Mo., Teachers at the National Intercollegiate Tournament last spring show that the athlete is moving faster than a walk only twelve minutes, fifty-nine seconds out of the required forty minutes to complete a game.

Scott's figures were compiled in the ever-present debate on the strenuosity of the game since the elimination of the center jump increased the actual playing time and stepped up the action.

Even Scott was surprised to learn the average athlete had more than twenty-seven minutes to pat his hair in place or wave to that certain co-ed in Section C.

The most active player in fifteen different games served as the guinea pig. The most time any of them moved faster than a walk was seventeen minutes, twenty-five seconds, the least eight minutes forty-eight seconds.

"Most spectators at a basketball game watch the ball rather than the individual," Scott said. "The ball moves with great rapidity and the spectator marvels at the ability of the players to keep going at such a clip."

Reds Sign Catcher

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 3 (AP) — Harold Hursh, who has been pitching forward passes on Indiana University fotball teams for three years, today signed a contract with the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club. Hursh is a catcher. Hursh, who has been ruled scolastically ineligible for baseball this year, will leave school to join the Reds.

Real Hitting

Three homers on three successive pitches were made by Napoleon Lajoie, Charlie Hickman and Bill Bradley against Joe Harpe, of St. Louis, in the sixth inning of a game on June 30, 1902. Cleveland won, 14 to 2.

Two Dozen Events Are Arranged for Indoor Games

Annual Event Will Be Held in Armory at Baltimore March 7

COLLEGE PARK, Feb. 4 (AP)—A track and field program listing two dozen events for Intercollegiate, Interscholastic, A.A.U., and athletes in military service was arranged today for the annual University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment Indoor Games at the Armory in Baltimore March 7.

Geary Eppley, games committee vice chairman, said entries would be accepted until Feb. 26, and that invitations already had gone out to several individuals, athletic clubs and colleges in the east.

In order to speed up the evening finals, officials said preliminaries in sprints and hurdles would be run off in the afternoon, with field events getting under way at 6:30 p. m.

As in past years, three feature events are on the program—the Governor's Mile, the Oriole 660, and the two-mile. Miss and Out. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has donated a silver bowl, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, a gold-finished vase for Oriole 660 winner, and a sterling silver plate will be awarded the two-mile winner.

These trophies may be retired permanently by athletes winning event twice, or the contestant making the best time over a three-year period.

In 1939, Jack Munski of Missouri retired the governor's trophy, negotiating the mile in 4:13.5, and in 1940 Archie San Romani, unattached, won in 4:16.1.

Sanford Goldberg of the Millrose Athletic Club, New York, has one leg on the Jackson vase by winning the Oriole 660 last year, while Tommy Deckard, unattached, went home with the two-mile plate by racing to a record 9:05.9.

Pirates Sign Fletcher, Ace Parker in Doubt

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 4 (AP)—With the signing Monday in New York of Elbie Fletcher, first baseman, the Pittsburgh Pirates have all of their regulars safely in tow excepting Arky Vaughan, shortstop; Bobby Klinger, pitcher, and Lloyd Waner, outfielder.

Fletcher went from his Wollaston, Mass., home to confer with W. E. Benswanger, president, and Frankie Frisch, manager, who were discussing training season plans in New York.

Clarence McKee (Ace) Parker and Al Anderson, two promising rokies, have not signed yet. Parker is expected to continue his pro football career with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Because he would have to report for practice in August, Parker likely would be sent back to the minors should he decide to continue with baseball also.

Angler Saves Catfish By Stunt on Trestle

White-haired sixty-eight-year-old J. G. Alexander, of West Hickory, N. C., saved his life and a prize string of sixteen catfish by hanging with one hand from a thirty-foot railroad trestle as a train roared past.

Alexander started across the trestle after a freight had passed, and did not see the second train until it was almost on him. He leaped, and the signal block scraped his leg and cut his left hand to the bone, but he held on with his right until the engineer stopped the train and helped him back to the trestle.

Reds Sell Pressnell

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — The world champion Cincinnati Reds sold Right-Handed Pitcher Forest (Tot) Pressnell to the Chicago Cubs today for an un-announced sum of cash.

Pressnell, with Brooklyn last summer, was sent to Louisville on option in part payment for Rookie Wes Flowers. Recalled by the Dodgers, he was sold to the St. Louis Cardinals, who in turn sold him to Cincinnati earlier this winter.

Baseball Caps Are Blackburn's Hobby

Russell Aubrey (Lena) Blackburn, new manager of Toronto in the International League, is a collector of baseball caps. Among his prize assortment hanging in his Palmyra, N. J., home is one worn before the turn of the century. He also has many of those he has worn as player, manager and coach on twelve major and minor league teams.

Ohio School Seeks West Virginia Mentor

CANTON, O., Feb. (AP)—The board of eductation, seeking a successor to Football Coach Johnny Reed of Canton McKinley High School, has virtually eliminated all but two men, it was reported today.

Paul Jenkins of Portsmouth High School and Floyd Schwartzwalder of Parkersburg (W.Va.) High are being considered. Reed resigned to accept a job at Monessen (Pa.) High.

Keyser Boys' Club Arranges Boxing Show for Feb. 28

Effort Is Being Made To Match Fitzpatrick and Charles Maoni

The second boxing event for Keyser will be held Friday night February 28 when the Keyser Boys' Club will stage another show at the K. of P. armory.

About 500 fans witnessed the fights held at the local armory last week and for the main event on Feb. 28 it is hoped to match Tarzan Fitzpatrick, of the West Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind at Romney, and Charles Maoni of Washington.

Fitzpatrick and Maoni were on the card last week but due to reterations at Huntington, W. Va., where Fitzpatrick was boxing in the Golden Gloves tournament the bout could not be held.

Joe McCarthy, former AAU Middleweight Champion, will also be on the card. Joe has already started training for the fight. His opponent has not yet been named but it is believed the Washington Police Club will supply the opponent for him.

Eight fights have been planned for the show. Several fighters will come from Cumberland and Washington, D. C.

Luster Named Coach Of Oklahoma Football

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 4 (AP) — Dewey (snorter) Luster, former backfield coach at the University of Oklahoma, was named head coach of the Soner fotball squad Monday by the board of regents. Lawrence (Jap) Haskell, freshman coach, was named director of athletics.

Luster, a Sooner star of twenty years ago, succeeds Tom Stidham, who resigned recently to accept the head coaching berth at Marquette University. Stidham also was director of athletics.

November Robbery Here Is Finally Solved

Four Persons Are Held In Sidney, N. Y.; Confess To Inspector Maynard

Empty Pocketbook and Quick Thinking by Gas Station Employee Gives Detective Flynn a Clue

An empty pocketbook combined with quick thinking on the part of a local service station attendant and a clever bit of sleuthing by a detective of the Cumberland Police Department has resulted in the arrest in Sidney, N. Y., of a gang of those robbers who confessed to burglarizing the home of William F. Staarman, of 621 Hill Top Drive, on the evening of Wednesday, November 13, 1940.

The story was unfolded last evening at local police headquarters by Detective Robert Emmett Flynn, who has conducted a one-man investigation of the robbery since 10 o'clock the night of November 13 when the Staarmans, returning home from a card party, notified police that their home had been robbed.

Valuables taken included stock certificates and baby bonds worth $2,000, several bank books, $85 in silver money in a wallet, two silver dollars, a $2.50 gold piece a set of lights of Columbus ruby ring, Mary's school pin and ring, a yellow gold watch chain, a suit of men's clothes, ladies' suit case, birth certificate and other articles.

Heinrich Makes Confession

Reams of correspondence were exchanged between Detective Flynn and various police departments of New York state over a period of almost two months and yesterday the local robbery finally was solved with a signed confession by Carl Heinrich to Inspector Maynard, of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, Sidney, N. Y.

Involved with Heinrich are his wife, Mrs. Irene Heinrich, James Woody and Orville Clark, all residents of New York State.

Following the arrests the Heinrichs and Clark were detained at the Broome County Jail, Binghamton, N. Y., in connection with the Cumberland robbery and for questioning in regards to burglaries in several other states.

In reviewing the case from its very start, Flynn said that back in November when the burglarly was reported, the Staarmans told him that they had left their home at about 6 p. m., and between that hour and 10 p. m., the robbery was committed. A glass was broken in a garage door in the basement and entry was thought to have been effected upstairs by use of a pass key in a door leading from the cellar to the kitchen. An attempt was made to break into another home the same night, but failed police were told.

With no clues to work on because nobody had seen the burglars enter or leave the building, Flynn admitted he had a tough case on his hands.

Pocketbook Is Clue

However, he was tipped off several days later by a friend that a service station attendant on Henderson avenue had found an empty pocketbook and upon investigation the detective discovered that it was the same pocketbook reported stolen from the Staarman home. Flynn brought the attendant in for questioning and the latter maintained that on the night of November 13 about 9 p. m., a woman picked up the pocketbook near his station and turned it over to him, remarking that perhaps one of the customers had lost it. The attendant further stated that he paid little attention to the pocketbook because it was empty. He then produced three witnesses to verify his statement about the woman finding it.

Questioned if he had seen any motorists acting suspicious, the attendant recalled that a New York car with trailer attached pulled

Hartford, Conn., Man to Speak at Meeting February 14

Wilfred A. Thompson, Times and Alleganian Company linotype operator, last night was elected president of the Western Maryland Amateur Radio Club at the annual election of officers at the Knights of Malta Hall, Prospect Square.

Other officers elected were Ray Hines, vice-president; and Howard Helms, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the executive committee were John Ridgeway, Matthew Groves, Melvin Riffey, T. R. Betts, Richard Graim, Merril Dawson and James L. Grant.

Plans were made for a meeting scheduled for February 14 when Clinton B. DeSoto, field representative of the American Relay League, Hartford, Conn., will speak from station WTBO on the problems of amateurs and the usefulness of hamm operators in aiding the defense program and in case of emergencies.

Dorothy Crawford, Noted Dramatist, To Appear Here

"One-Woman Theater" Coming for Fifth Program of Form Series, Feb. 20

Dorothy Crawford, known to theater-goers here and abroad as the "One-woman theater," will appear in a distinctive program of original character sketches at the Allegany high school auditorium, Thursday, February 20, at 8:15 p. m., under the auspices of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce.

Miss Crawford will appear in the fifth of a series of programs of the 1940-41 Cumberland Community Forum. Walter Pitkin, humorist; Maj. George Fielding Eliot, military authority; Dr. Morris Fishbein, medical authority, and Prof. J. Anton deHaas, economist, preceded Miss Crawford on the present season's program. Rep. Hamilton Fish, of New York, a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, will round out the season's program here March 19.

Acclaimed by critics as one of the foremost impersonators of our time, on a par with Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner, Miss Crawford is a former musician and composer who turned to the stage with immediate success.

A brilliant monologist, her character sketches, running the gamut of emotion and experience, are projected with extraordinary technique. With the aid of a piano, straight chair and small table, Miss Crawford peoples the stage with a delightful assortment of unforgettable characters.

She portrays in her extensive repertoire characters of Italy, Spain, France, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Russia, Ireland, England and Scotland. She not only has a working knowledge of the native language of these people, but is familiar with the geographical variations in the language of each.

While abroad several years ago, Miss Crawford devoted her time to learning various European languages and interesting native songs. At the same time, she tucked away in her memory odd and colorful characters who were later to emerge in her repertoire.

Miss Crawford's appearance originally was scheduled for Friday, Feb. 21, but the date has been changed by request of a number of members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, to enable them to attend another meeting.

Two Young Boys Are Treated for Minor Injuries at Allegany

Two three-year-old boys were treated yesterday at Allegany hospital for injuries suffered in minor accidents.

Herbert Kifer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kifer, of Flintstone, suffered scalp lacerations yesterday morning when the sled on which he was riding reportedly struck a barber wire fence near his home. Four sutures were used to close the wound.

Donald Smith, son of Mrs. Beulah Smith, of Potomac Park, suffered a bruised right arm when it caught in a clothes wringer at home. No bones were broken.

Both were discharged after receiving treatment.

Young Girl Admitted To Memorial for Treatment of Burns

Hazel Himes, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Himes, Bowman's addition, was admitted to Memorial hospital yesterday suffering from burns about the chest, neck, face, left leg and arm.

The child was playing in the kitchen Monday when in some manner she caught her dress on fire. Her mother extinguished the blaze with water but the child was burned painfully.

Her condition is not serious, but she was taken to the hospital for treatment.

City Officials File for Dismissal Of Officer's Seniority Complaint

The mayor and city council of Cumberland yesterday asked that the seniority complaint embodied in the writ of mandamus asked by Officer Edward P. Wilson be dismissed on the grounds that the matter is "purely administrative" and and rests in the discretion of the police and fire commissioner.

Officer Wilson's petition in circuit court, giving expression in a seniority tangle involving himself and eight other officers who joined the police force on June 1, 1939, asked specifically that his superiors be ordered to return him to the 1 a. m. to 9 p. m. shift, which he formerly was on. Wilson has asked further that the seniority list posted January 1, 1940, be discontinued in favor of the list made after June 1, 1936, based on determination by lottery.

Seniority Not Defined

The answer, filed by City Solicitor Charles Z. Heskett, states that Chapter 34 of the Acts of 1937 provided certain rights and privileges for members of the police force but failed to define the term "seniority" used therein. This has resulted in considerable misunderstanding and resulted in an attempt by the police chief, since its passage, to ascertain its intent and give it practical force and value.

The answer sets forth that at the formal induction of the nine police officers on June 1, 1936, all were required to sign a book setting forth the oath of office administered to them and that the signing was done in random fashion with a time interval intervening between the acts of individual signing. If the order of signing is used as a basis of seniority, then Officer Wilson is only eligible for the shift assigned him January 1, 1940, the answer says.

CONFESS TO ROBBERY HERE—

Investigation of the robbery here November 13, at the home of W. F. Staarman, 621 Hill Top drive, was solved yesterday with a confession by Carl E. Heinrich, of Albany, N. Y., that he, his step-son, James Woody, and Orville Clark, also of Albany, entered the local house and departed with $1,500 in stocks and bonds and other valuables. Finding of an empty pocketbook, part of the loot, at a local service station gave Detective Robert Emmett Flynn, of the Cumberland Police Department, his first clue, which led to the roundup of Heinrich, his wife, and Clark in Sidney, N. Y. Prior to the arrest of the trio, Woody was jailed for a parole violation and returned to the Elmira, N. Y., reformatory. The other three are now lodged in jail at Binghamton, N. Y., for questioning in connection with other burglaries. The three men all have criminal records.

Programs Are Arranged For Scout Anniversary

Sportsmen Launch Membership Drive

300 Members Are Sought Here; Joseph A. Minke Tells of Game Census

A campaign to enroll at least three hundred members was officially launched last night at an enthusiastim meeting of the Cumberland unit, of the Square Circle Sportsmen's Association, in the city hall auditorium.

Members of the local unit were authorized to solicit members at fifty cents each and it is hoped to build up a stronger organization in the city.

Percy E. Sowers, president; O. F. Phillips, secretary, and J. G. Bert Trieber, all spoke on matters pertaining to the enlistment of more members.

Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, gave a talk on the game census being conducted in the county, and announced that a partial survey last week resulted in the locating of five flocks of wild turkey with thirteen birds in the largest flock; twenty-two coveys of Bob White quail, with six to eighteen birds in a covey, and thirty-seven grouse. The census is being made on game birds and will be continued, Minke said.

The regional game warden also announced that 10,000 rabbits will be distributed throughout the state next month and said he was hopeful that at least 900 would be placed in Allegany county.

Minke reported that quail had staged a remarkable comeback following the severe winter of 1936, that squirrels were plentiful but rabbits were scarce in Allegany county.

The club announced that it is planning to open a shooting range, adaptable to shot gun and rifle, at a suitable location in the county, and that it hoped to obtain moving pictures from the State Game Department for its next meeting here. Game wardens will be extended invitations to attend and review their experiences.

Board To Meet

The executive board meeting of Merici Veteran Unit, of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, will be held today at 8:15 p. m. at the home of Miss Mary L. Mattingly, 12 Fourth street.

UMWA Opposed to Explosives Bill

Unless Wording Is Modified Act Will Cause Needless Suffering, They Say

Voicing the opinion of District No. 16, United Mine Workers of America, officials reported yesterday they are opposed to a proposed bill for regulation of the sale and possession of explosives, designed as a national defense measure.

Officials contend the act, introduced in the House of Delegates and referred to the committee on insurance and loans, would cause a needless burden to hundreds of miners in this section, unless the wording is modified. The measure would compel every person who uses explosives of any kind to obtain a license, costing $1 a year, from the clerk of the circuit court.

It is estimated that 3,000 coal miners in Allegany and Garrett counties would be affected by the legislation, in addition to quarry workers throughout the state who use dynamite or other explosives in their work. If passed in its present form, the law would take effect on the date of its passage, and hundreds of miners would lose at least a day's work to obtain their license here and in Oakland. The license would be renewed each year.

Termed an emergency measure the act, which also provides a $10 license fee for manufacturers and a $5 license fee for dealers in explosives, would be in effect until May 15, 1945, and thereafter whenever the United States is at war.

Dundon Concedes To George Meyers In Textile Election

Declares Record Breaking Vote Is a Healthy Sign

With more than one half of the ballots counted, James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, TWUA, conceded the annual election of the textile union to his opponent, George A Meyers, Jr.

"The election has been conducted in a true democratic manner," Dundon, who has held the presidency of the union three times, said last night, "and the returns indicate Mr. Meyers' election by a large majority.

"I congratulate my successor in his splendid victory and wish him success and offer my support and co-operation during his tenure in office.

"It is gratifying to know that the largest vote in the history of the union was cast in this election," Dundon said. "This indicates not only the steady growth of our organization in the past four years but also the increased interest of the members in the affairs of their union which I regard as a very healthy condition."

Meyers, present recording secretary of the union, is from Lonaconing.

Election Board officials headed by Miss Janet Castle will continue the count today.

Two Suits Filed Here for Divorce

Boyd T. Bohrer Charges Desertion; Mrs. Laura L. Ayers Asks Partial Decree

Charging that his wife deserted and abandoned him while they were sojourning in Florida, Boyd T. Bohrer yesterday filed suit for an absolute divorce in circuit court from his wife, Mrs. Hazel Bohrer, now residing in Oldtown.

According to the petition docketed by Paul M. Fletcher, attorney, the couple was married in 1932 and that no children were born of the marriage. Bohrer charges his wife left him in February, 1936.

Woman Ask Partial Divorce

In another action, Mrs. Laura Mae Ayers, Cumberland, brought suit for a partial divorce from Vincent Ayres, near Barton.

The petition filed by Thomas Lohr Richards states that the couple was married in 1911 and lived together until September, 1940. Five children were born of the marriage.

Mrs. Ayres charges that she and her husband purchased a farm near Barton. In September, she contends, her health became impaired resulting in the defendant bringing her to Cumberland to live with a cousin.

Since that time, the defendant has contributed only $2 towards his wife's support, the petition charges. Furthermore, he will not permit his wife to return home, the suit alleges.

Ask for Custody of Children

Mrs. Ayers has asked for a partial divorce, the guardianship of the minor children, and support.

Associate Judge William A. Huster ordered the defendant to pay his wife $25 a month pending the outcome of the case.

State School Official Is Visitor Here

Miss I. Jewell Simpson, of Baltimore, assistant state superintendent of public schools, will conclude a three-day visit to Allegany county today. She spoke at meetings of teacher groups Monday and yesterday and also is scheduled to give a talk today. The meetings are held for the purpose of improving instruction.

Dundon Is Invited To Take Part In Broadcast to British Workers

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, TWUA, has been invited to participate in a special short wave broadcast to British workers by American trades union officials.

The request was made by Walter Reichenbach, field worker of the British-American Ambulance Corps, who explained in his letter that Dundon would be asked to extend a special greeting to thousands of Celanse workers on British soil.

It was pointed out that Cumberland is an industrial town not unlike many in the heart of the British industrial area and that it would be appropriate for a union leader from such a town to say a few words on such a broadcast.

In another letter to Dundon, H. E. Mordan, director of the Industrial division of the Ambulance corps, pointed out that one of the features of this division was the daily short wave broadcast from Station WRUL, called the "Friendship Bridge." This program, Mordan said, strikes England at a time when everyone is in air raid shelters, and the many letters coming from abroad attest to the extreme value on the morale of the people.

"As an example," Mordan said, "it would be a fine thing for your leader, Phillip Murray, to talk to the workers of Scotland, giving them the encouragement they need.

Mordan also said the division would like very much to have Sidney Hillman appear on the program.

Dundon said yesterday he had contacted CIO headquarters and that plans are now being made for the program as requested. Both Hillman and Emil Rieve, textile union head, have agreed to take part and an effort to secure Murray is being made

'Good Neighbor' Policy Hailed for Thawing Out Pan-American Relations

ON ELKS PROGRAM—Arthur B. Gibson will serve as exalted ruler tonight during ceremonies which will be featured by the unveiling of a bronze tablet inscribed with the names of 184 departed members of Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B.P.O. Elks.

New World Solidarity Is Wishful Thinking, Club-women Are Told

Thanks to President Roosevelt's "Good Neighbor" policy, frosty Pan-American relations are now being thawed out, and the answer to the question, "Is New World Solidarity Wishful Thinking?", is no.

That in a nutshell represents the opinion of George Howland Cox, college professor and editor, who last night gave the members of the Cumberland Business and Professional Women's Club a comprehensive earful of Latin-America relations.

Like Prof. J. Anton de Haas, recent Forum lecturer, Mr. Cox inclined to neatly divide the history of our Latin-American relations into two parts, namely, "Before Roosevelt" and "After Roosevelt."

Makes Informative Address

Packing in information with the tenacity of Time magazine (minus the sophmoric bounce, however), the white-maned, pink-complexioned speaker obviously was present at the Fort Cumberland hotel last night to edify, not to entertain. Result was a highly informative address minus any oratorical flourishes works or funny stories.

Drawing his picture of Latin-American relations prior to Roosevelt in minutest detail, Cox pointed out that continual butting in by the United States Government in South America, augmented by the visits of Yankee exploiters whose sole purpose was to make money and then go home, was instrumental in developing anything but cordial relations over a period of years.

Unlike Germany, Italy and other European countries, the United States made little effort to acquaint itself with Latin American background and more often than not visitors in those countries butchered the language of whatever country they happened to be in and made no effort to improve themselves, he said. At the same time we neglected to acquaint Latin America with the background of the United States.

Fostered Misunderstanding

The result was an unhealthy relationship fostered by mutual misunderstanding. Meanwhile, there began an influx of European propaganda which was embraced by Latin-Americans because the propagandists went to the trouble of studying the people the literature was aimed at.

Next, soldiers in Chile were being trained by German officers and the efficiency of the Germans brought about a profound respect on the part of Latin-Americans.

Then, on a certain drab, cold day in Washington, D. C., March 4, 1933, to be exact, Franklin D. Roosevelt was sworn in as president of the United States and shortly thereafter reached out his hand to Latin America and proposed that "we all be good neighbors."

While Latin American countries regarded this cordial overture with more curiosity than hope at the beginning, gradually they commenced to warm up to the new administration which practiced what it preached and showed that it wanted to cooperate, not to interfere, Cox said.

Cites Other Factors

There were other factors. By 1933, all small countries were growing uneasy over the militant German "race supremacy", on one hand, and the Russian "World Revolution" on the other.

The Pan-American conference followed with Secretary of State Cordell Hull playing a prominent part. In 1936 came Pan-American Solidarity, termed a "fortunate move" by the speaker. In 1938, the nations met again to tighten the bonds as the small countries of Europe wondered what they could

The body is at Hafer's funeral home.

Patterson Will Address Jaycees

Maryland Welfare Director Scheduled To Speak at Dinner Here, Feb. 10

J. Milton Patterson, director of the Maryland State Department of Public Welfare, will be the guest speaker Monday, February 10, at the dinner meeting of the Junior Association of Commerce, at the Golden Gate Tea Room, it was announced yesterday by Fred Hetzel, president.

The meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p. m.

Patterson, former head of the Allegany County Welfare Board, held the post of executive secretary of the Board of State Aid and Charities before he was elevated to director of the state agency. He is a former resident of Cumberland and now makes his headquarters in Baltimore.

The state director will confer with Miss Elsie Heipp, executive secretary of the Allegany County Welfare Board, during his visit in Cumberland.
